State House Asks Senate For Conference on Funds

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri House asked the Senate today to grant a conference on the $20.5 million emergency money bill after the House Appropriations chairman said he would accept a $6 million Senate addition for state aid to water pollution control projects.

Appropriations Chairman E. J. Cantrell, D-Overland, said he would take the major Senate change because the Water Pollution Board couldn't possibly allocate all the state aid money before June 30, the end of this fiscal year.

His action scotched a plan already afoot to block his attempt to ask for a House-Senate conference. Veteran Rep. Thomas A. Walsh, D-St. Louis, was all set to ask that the water pollution change be accepted by the House.

But when Cantrell acceeded on that point the House agreed to delay final adjournment so other changes made by the Senate in the appropriations bill could be looked at.

Cantrell said the Senate made 18 changes and he thought the House could accept some of them if they were explained in conference.

As recommended by the governor, the bill contained a little over $21 million in general revenue tax money. The House cut that to $13.6 million but Tuesday the Senate expanded the total to $20.5 million.

Named to the conference committee to adjust differences on the appropriation bill were Reps. Cantrell, Walsh, William F. Casey, D-Posoti; Charles H. Dickey, D-Mexico, and William C. Phelps, R-Kansas City.

Senate conferees include appropriations chairman T. D. McNeal, D-St. Louis, and Sens. J. F. Patterson, D-Caruthersville; Nelson B. Tinnin, D-Hornersville; Omer H. Avery, D-Troy, and Edward Stone Jr., R-Chesterfield.

The water pollution board asked Gov. Warren E. Hearnes to recommend that amount. He declined but did insert the request without his support in his emergency budget.

The House Appropriations Committee and the House sided with the governor and rejected the item, despite pleas from the Water Pollution Board that it would mean a big loss in the state's efforts to clean up its streams.

The Senate committee also rejected it but it was approved, 22-10, on the Senate floor.

Smithton Youngsters Thrilled With Train Ride

By MARY PROCTOR
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

SMITHTON — "It's like a moment in history," observed one of the 20 or so bystanders waiting Tuesday afternoon for the Missouri-Pacific passenger train to discharge 54 third and fourth graders of Smithton School. For most of them it was their first ride on a train.

With train travel becoming as rare as a trip by Conestoga wagon, or a stagecoach, the bystander was right. As the train pulled up, J.D. Richardson, station master at Smithton, observed that it was the first stop for passengers that the train had made in over 15 years.

The children tumbled off and headed for their school bus, herded by Mrs. Opal Johnson, school principal; their teachers, Mrs. Johyce Kolsky and Mrs. Jennie Lee Castle, and a student aide, Mrs. Lois Monees.

Typically laconic, the children observed that the ride had been "fine," "great" "too short" and "okay." But since transportation is the current topic being studied this month by the reading and social studies classes at the school, the children will undoubtedly shake the stars from their eyes in compositions and class discussions through the rest of the week.

As for the teachers, and Mrs. Johnson, they observed that the children seemed amazed at the whole concept of trains. "They couldn't believe, for instance, that the train wouldn't fall off the track if it turned a corner," the principal said.

A special agent of the railway, John Snyder of Kansas City, road foreman of engines, acted as the escort for the students. Talking freely among other passengers aboard their train, the children seemed surprised that it was possible to travel as far as California and Washington State on a train.

Being side-tracked at Knob Noster, for a taster train to pass, seemed the highlight of the trip for many of the children, only four of whom had ever ridden a train before. One boy, over-excited at the 10-minute wait and the overall excitement, had a slight attack of hysteria. "But the train conductor couldn't have been more considerate," said Mrs. Johnson. "He took care of him and comforted him as if he had been his own child."

The second and third graders had left the school shortly after lunch, were bussed to the Warrensburg depot, and had bought their own tickets, one by one, from the stationmaster to board the eastbound train home.

What's the quote? "...for we may never pass this way again?" Perhaps not that particular way again, but it's unlikely that few of them will ever forget the trip.

Hospital Retains Architects

The board of trustees of Bothwell Hospital voted Monday night to retain the architectural firm of Marshall & Brown, Kansas City, to design a $2.5 million expansion of the hospital.

The board interviewed five firms before making a selection.

Work on preparation of preliminary drawings for the expansion project is expected to begin immediately, the board reported.

Medical Planning Associates, Malibu, Calif., which has been working on a master plan for the hospital for the last several months, will continue in a consulting capacity with Marshall & Brown, the board said.

The expansion would be financed by a $2.5 million bond issue. Don Feeback, hospital administrator, said the board has set a "very tentative" date of May 5 for the bond election.

As things now stand, the expansion would probably be accomplished without matching federal funds, since Bothwell Hospital presently has what Feeback calls a "low priority" for such funds.

Priorities are set up by a formula applied by the State Department of Health. That department currently lists Bothwell Hospital as requiring only 142 beds. A total of 148 are in service now.

Feeback says the board hopes to be able to convince state officials that the need for more beds exists, based on findings of a master study completed about a year ago by a University of Missouri team as well as Medical Planning Associates' recommendations.

Although based on the current formula Bothwell

FFA Officers Visit in Sedalia

State officers of the Missouri Future Farmers of America were in Sedalia Tuesday and Wednesday as part of their annual goodwill tour this time in the West-Central Missouri region.

The youths arrived here Tuesday and toured The Democrat-Capital plant. Wednesday morning the group visited the State Fairgrounds and spoke at the noon meeting of the Lions Club in the Bothwell Hotel before departing for Warrensburg.

As an indicator of FFA participation in the State Fair, last year a total of 1,758 livestock, crop and booth exhibits were shown at the fair by FFA members.

Wilbert Askew, State Fair secretary, accompanied the group while in Sedalia. Also making the tour are Carl Humphrey, state director of agriculture education, and Raymond Hagen, FFA state director.

The group visiting Sedalia included the vice-president from each of the six state FFA districts and the six at-large state officers.

The tour began in Jefferson City on Monday, where the

Republicans Ask Promise Of Alternative HEW Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Key Republicans in today's House vote to override President Nixon's veto of the $19.7 billion health-education bill sought last-minute assurances the administration would come up with an acceptable alternative.

An Associated Press poll prior to this afternoon's scheduled vote showed many of the 86 GOP representatives who voted for the bill when it passed the House Dec. 22 awaited such assurances before deciding which way to go.

Of 80 Republicans reached, 36 said they were awaiting the administration's alternative plan; 26 said they would vote to sustain the veto and 18 said they would vote to override.

Republican leaders had said they were confident they had the 145 votes to defeat the attempt to override if all House members vote.

Democrats said even if they lost the battle they still would make the bill a major campaign issue in the November elections. Leaders of both sides said the end result would be good for them at the polls.

Rep. Albert H. Quie, R-Minn., said Tuesday the White House had agreed to accept a $442 million funding level in a new bill for the crucial impact aid section allocating funds to school districts which have heavy enrollments because of federal installations.

Nixon, in vetoing the bill, told the nation Monday the $1.2 billion more than he requested in the measure was inflationary. He took special aim at $600 million for the impact aid when he said the measure provided "the wrong amount for the wrong purpose and at the wrong time."

The President originally proposed $202 million for the impacted aid.

Republican congressmen went into the vote torn between loyalty to the GOP president and pressure from home for the health and education funds as provided in the $19.7 billion measure. School officials said the veto could cause havoc and health authorities warned research programs would be crippled.

This was the first time in a decade for Congress to attempt to override a presidential veto. In 1960 the legislators overwhelmingly approved a 7½ per cent federal pay raise bill after President Dwight D. Eisenhower had rejected it.

Hubert H. Humphrey, who was a Democratic senator at the time of that vote, said Tuesday night in Philadelphia that he hoped Congress would be able to upset the Nixon veto. The former vice president and Nixon's opponent in 1968, said he didn't think the bill had anything to do with inflation.

Senate Republicans watched today's vote closely, hoping the House would sustain the veto and thus save them the agony of voting on it. The measure had passed the House 261-110 in December and the Senate 74-17 last week.

A two-thirds vote in each house is required to override a veto.

Hassle On Drugs Lingers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate debate on the drug control bill moved into its final stages today with a hassle over lowering federal penalties for possession and use of marijuana.

Sen. Harold Hughes, D-Iowa, in proposing more liberalized treatment of marijuana users said Tuesday the government should work more to rehabilitate drug offenders.

However, Sen. Thomas J. Dodd, D-Conn., chief sponsor of the omnibus drug control measure, said "This is not a rehabilitation bill. This is a law enforcement bill. These amendments would take the heart out of this legislation."

The Hughes amendment was aimed at trimming in half the original bill's penalty provisions of a possible $5,000 fine or up to one year in jail for a first conviction of marijuana possession.

The Dodd bill also sharply differentiated between the casual user of marijuana—or the college student who sells a few marijuana cigarettes to friends at cost—and the professional trafficker in hard narcotics.

Under the bill a professional criminal who derives a substantial percentage of his income from drug sales can be sentenced on a first offense from five years to life in prison and be fined up to $50,000. Further convictions are dealt with even more harshly.

Hughes introduced his amendment after a three-day fight ended over an attempt by Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., to eliminate a provision allowing government agents to raid without warning a home where drugs are suspected being used or stored.

Ervin contended the so-called "No-Knock" provision violated the constitutional guarantees against unreasonable search and seizure.

President Thieu Reveals Plans for Holiday Truce

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu said today that "in principle, and like every year, there will be a truce" for the Tet festival of the lunar new year on Feb. 6.

"However," Thieu said in a communique, "The government has not decided because there still is time to make the decision, and furthermore, the government still needs to observe the situation."

The Viet Cong already has announced a four-day cease-fire beginning Feb. 5.

Allied sources said that Thieu probably will declare a 24-hour cease-fire but will keep the South Vietnamese army on a full alert. A spokesman for the U.S. Command said American forces will observe the government's cease-fire as they have in past holiday periods.

South Vietnamese military headquarters announced that beginning Friday all except emergency leaves will be canceled for two weeks to insure that government troops are at their posts.

The enemy launched its biggest offensive of the war during Tet 1968 when 50 per cent of the South Vietnamese forces were on leave.

Allied intelligence analysts have said they expect the enemy to launch intensified rocket, mortar and commando attacks just before or just after Tet, but they do not anticipate a large-scale ground attack similar to the 1968 offensive.

In addition to canceling leaves as a precaution against an enemy offensive, the South Vietnamese government lengthened curfews in some cities, including Can Tho, the biggest city and military base in the Mekong Delta.

To the southwest in the delta, South Vietnamese troops closed out an operation in the U Minh Forest and pulled out along the outer edge to block any enemy thrust.

Allied forces claimed they killed 86 North Vietnamese and Viet Cong troops in a half dozen clashes during the past 24 hours. Allied casualties were one South Vietnamese soldier killed and 10 wounded.

No American casualties were reported in U.S. communiques.

Meanwhile, more than 500 U.S. Marines sailed from Da Nang for San Diego aboard the transport Ogden. They are the first of the 50,000 American troops President Nixon has ordered withdrawn by April 15.

Carswell Claims Judges Not Presidential Aides

WASHINGTON (AP) — Judge G. Harrold Carswell said today that Supreme Court justices have quite enough to do in carrying out their constitutional responsibilities without serving as presidential advisers.

The question was raised at the second day of the Senate Judiciary Committee's hearings on President Nixon's nomination of Carswell, a 50-year-old Southerner, to be an associate justice of the Supreme Court.

Sen. Robert P. Griffin, R-Mich., said some objections had been raised that the court not only has infringed on the legislative powers of Congress but its members have involved themselves in the affairs of the executive branch of the government.

He referred specifically to former Justice Abe Fortas who, he said, served almost as a day-to-day adviser to former President Lyndon B. Johnson.

Griffin, who led the fight that blocked Johnson's nomination of Fortas to be chief justice, asked Carswell for his view of what role Supreme Court justices should play in this respect.

Carswell said he did not think a justice should be an adviser to the President in the sense Griffin referred to and added that he couldn't conceive of Nixon calling on him to do anything like that.

He remarked that he had met Nixon only once when he shook hands with him in 1954.

He did not, however, preclude a president calling on Supreme Court members to undertake assignments in noncontroversial matters, saying that a president must have over-all responsibilities.

Carswell, now a judge on the Extension agronomy agent Vic Carothers points out methods of identifying Johnson grass, a dangerous weed infesting area farms. Carothers addressed more than 50 county farmers who attended Wednesday's seminar at the Holiday Inn to discuss problems and control of the weed. (Democrat-Capital Photo)

More than 50 Pettis County farmers attended a day-long seminar on Johnson grass weed Wednesday, which the county Weed Control Board calls "an alarming problem" plaguing fields and crop yield.

Walter Nicholson, chairman of the Pettis County Weed Control Board, which was set up especially to combat the weed, said, "Johnson grass is on the increase in the county. Approximately 150 farms are now affected."

Program co-ordinator Milton C. Mathew began the seminar, held at the Holiday Inn, with slides showing the destruction of good farm land by the weed. Mathew also showed pictures of infested fields near Flat Creek, Smithton and Georgetown, areas in the county where the weed is a big problem.

Johnson grass is valuable in arid states like Oklahoma and Texas for grazing and a prevention of erosion, but its rapid growth seriously damages crops in this section of the country.

St. Joseph Citizens Brace for PSC Hike

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. (AP)—Water users in St. Joseph met Tuesday night to hear several speakers encourage the group to circulate petitions appealing to the Missouri Public Service Commission to delay a proposed water rate increase.

The group is opposing a $7.68 annual water charge per customer which St. Joseph Water Co. plans to assess.

The company says it needs the money because an $180,000 annual fee which the city previously paid for rent on fire hydrants has been discontinued.

The campaign group hopes to secure 2,000 to 3,000 signatures by Saturday on a petition opposing the increase. It plans to present the petition Monday to the Missouri Public Service Commission in Jefferson City.

Newsman Dies At Age of 94

WENTZVILLE, Mo. (AP) — Funeral services will be held in Wentzville Wednesday for John Boos, who published and edited newspapers in several Missouri cities and served on the public relations committee of the St. Louis World's Fair in 1904.

Boos, 94, died Sunday at the St. Louis Geriatrics Center in Chesterfield, Mo.

Services will be at the Pitman Funeral Home with burial in Linn Cemetery in Wentzville.

Boos was born in Hermann, Mo., and worked there as a printer. He moved to Westphalia to buy and publish a German-language newspaper.

After moving to St. Louis in 1904, Boos published a German-language newspaper in Clayton.

He also edited newspapers in Sedalia, Mo., and Pittsburg, Kan.

Until his retirement in 1955, Boos was co-publisher and editor of the Wentzville Union.

Survivors include three sons, Leslie of St. Louis, Herbert of Minneapolis and Elmer of Pensacola, Fla.; five grandchildren and two great grandchildren, and a sister, Mrs. Marie Baumstark.

Johnson

can be quite devastating, explained Vic Carothers, Extension agronomy agent. "People are the worst spreaders. When plowing or harvesting crops, the seed scatters and takes hold elsewhere very quickly. Also if the roots are chopped up each section will grow a new plant."

A law combating Johnson grass was passed in the county in 1968, and the County Court appropriated $1,500 last year for the control board. In addition, a sprayer truck was purchased this month and the board plans to spray all county and Sedalia city streets this summer. It will take about three years to eradicate the weed from these areas, officials estimate.

Lloyd Lewellen, area Extension farm management specialist, discussed the economics of the problem. "In the case of Johnson grass an ounce of prevention is worth a ton of cure," he said. Lewellen also reported that the weed can destroy a whole field within five years if left unchecked.

The seminar included a noon luncheon during which representatives from several chemical companies displayed various herbicides and their effects on Johnson grass.

Police are Issued Deadly Ammunition

ST. LOUIS (AP)—The suburban University City Police Department began issuing more deadly ammunition to its men following funeral services Tuesday for Detective James E. Boevingloh, 35. He was killed Friday in a gun battle with an armed robber in a jewlery store.

Less than two weeks ago, Patrolman Wilbert Downey was killed in a gun fight with service station bandits.

The new .38 caliber bullets, called "maximum security bullets" by police but popularly known as dum-dums, are made of soft lead and have hollow points. They flatten on impact and have greater shocking power than solid bullets used by University City police in the past.

St. Louis police also use maximum security ammunition.

Chief James Damos said it is hoped the new bullets "will stop a person before he can do greater damage."

"These bullets should give additional confidence to our officers, especially since the men have become more concerned with this second, tragic death."

Say Hired Gunman Killed Yablonski and His Family

CLEVELAND (AP) — Sources close to the Yablonski family slaying investigation said today three hired gunmen killed the United Mine Workers official and his wife and daughter, and that a fourth man who backed out of the assignment was in custody.

The Cleveland Plain Dealer, in a copyright story in today's editions, said the killers were promised $1,700 apiece. The story added that the triple slaying stemmed from "a personal beef," not connected with union matters.

Other developments reported by the Plain Dealer and other sources:

— Navy deep-sea divers found a .38-caliber pistol Tuesday in the Monongahela River about five miles from the Clarksville, Pa., home where Joseph A. Yablonski, 59, his wife, Margaret, 57, and daughter, Charlotte Joanne, 25, were slain.

— FBI agents extended their investigation into the Kentucky and Tennessee coal mine fields where Yablonski, a rebel leader in the UMW was a household name among miners.

— In Cleveland, U.S. Attorney Robert B. Krupansky said a grand jury investigation into the slayings, which opened Tuesday, probably would be extended through next week.

— The Plain Dealer reported that "all the information gathered led authorities to conclude the deaths were 'a hit' or hired killing."

Three men have been charged with murder in the slayings. They are Paul E. Gilly, 36, Claude E. Vealey, 26, and Aubran W. Martin, 21, all of the Cleveland area.

Reporting that its information had been pieced together from various sources, the Plain Dealer gave this account:

Yablonski's home had been visited several times before the killings. On one trip the slayers entered the house when the family was absent and made friends with the family dog, and on another occasion two of the men confronted Yablonski at the door, intending to kill him then, but changed their minds. The Yablonskis were slain in their bedrooms Dec. 31. The bodies were not found until Jan. 5.

The night of the slaying, the men entered the Yablonski home, one with a .38-caliber pistol assigned to the daughter's bedroom and another with a 30-caliber M1 carbine to fire from the hallway into the parents' bedroom.

A few miles from the house they threw the carbine and pistol into the Monongahela River.

"The men later consoled themselves, 'It would be a big splash in the Clarksville paper and blow over in a couple of days,'" the Plain Dealer said.

Gilly's wife, Annette, and two of the victim's sons, Joseph Jr. and Kenneth, were among those who testified at the grand jury hearings Tuesday.

Krupansky refused to comment on testimony taken at the opening session or on the developments reported by the Plain Dealer.

Yablonski lost a bitter Dec. 6 election attempt to unseat UMW President W. A. "Tony" Boyle.

Investigators have said that none of those charged in the slayings had union connections.

Carswell

Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, was nominated by Nixon last week to fill the Supreme Court seat vacated by Fortas' resignation under fire last May.

At today's hearing, Carswell collected bouquets from Republican members of the committee who told him they had been impressed by his testimony and his record as a judge and would support his confirmation.

Griffin, the assistant Senate GOP leader who helped turn the tide against Nixon's earlier nomination of Judge Clement F. Haynsworth Jr. for the Fortas seat, told Carswell "we could use a lot more of your kind of mediocrity."

Griffin added he intended that as a compliment and it was obvious he was hitting back at Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., and others who have attacked Carswell as a man distinguished primarily by a record of mediocrity.

On Tuesday, Carswell swore he never has and never would take fees for off-the-bench activities, and would be willing to disclose his financial affairs.

At the start of the hearings the 50-year-old southerner, confirmed by the Senate last June as a judge on the 5th U.S. Court of Appeals, swore he is no racist.

"I have no notions, secretive, open or otherwise, of racial superiority," he testified in repudiating a 1948 political speech supporting white supremacy.

Carswell said he wouldn't expect the committee to vote for his confirmation if the members thought he harbored ideas of that kind.

Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., in raising questions of judicial ethics, told Carswell he wanted to know what his standards would be "if your nomination is confirmed, which I think it will be."

Bayh, who led the fight against Judge Clement F. Hayns worth Jr., President Nixon's first nominee for the Supreme Court post, later told newsmen his comment didn't necessarily mean he was going to vote for Carswell.

Carswell, who lives in Tallahassee, Fla., was nominated by Nixon Jan. 19 for the Supreme Court seat vacated by Abe Fortas last May.

Haynsworth, rejected by the Senate 55 to 45 last November, not only had stiff labor and civil rights opposition but also was pictured by Bayh and others as giving an appearance of impropriety because of stock transactions while on the bench.

Carswell, also opposed by labor and civil rights groups, testified he owns no stocks or bonds and told the committee that "certainly a judge should not sit in a case where there is an appearance of impropriety."

When asked about a country club in Tallahassee that took over a public golf course and kept it segregated after a 1955 Supreme Court decision requiring desegregation of public recreation facilities, Carswell said he took no part in its affairs.

He at first testified he had never been a director or other officer of the club and had not been one of its incorporators, but he later agreed under questioning by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that he had been an incorporator or something similar.

Carswell said at the request of a friend he had contributed $100 to fix up the clubhouse and received one share of stock.

He said he sold the stock for $75 the next year because he was not a golfer and made little use of the club.

Still later Tuesday, Carswell said he had been testifying from memory about the club and whatever its records showed would be the best evidence.

But he said whether the records listed him as an officer, an incorporator or something else, he had "no discussions with anyone about any discriminatory practices, if there were any," and had no connection with its operations.

Carswell also was asked about a news story linking a party in his home with race track lobbying. He said he had nothing to do with the party and had "absolutely nothing to do with any lobbying in my home."

The Miami Herald reported last week two Florida state senators had complained they were subjected to sophisticated lobbying for a proposed race track after being invited to the Carswell home last spring.

Carswell, who was a U.S. district court judge for 11 years before his elevation to the 5th Court of Appeals, was told by Bayh that allegations had been made that he used every means to delay civil rights cases.

Contractors Form a Group At Meeting

At a meeting of Pettis County contractors at State Fair Restaurant Tuesday evening, Daniel L. Wolf of the Wolf Const. Co. was elected president; C. W. Summers, of the Summers and DeMoss Const. Co., vice-president and John S. Cover, of the Cover Construction Co., secretary-treasurer.

Daniel Wolf

The election followed organization by the 28 contractors present of the Pettis County Excavating Contractors Association.

Russell K. Evans, representative of the Dean Machinery Co., presented a program on the economic outlook of the 1970's for excavating contractors in the Kaysinger Dam and local road programs.

Gets 15 Years For a Robbery Near Junction

(Democrat-Capital Service)

JEFFERSON CITY — Dale Gaddis, one of two escapees from a Kansas prison farm who robbed a combination filling station-grocery store in Saline County last summer, was sentenced to 15 years in prison Tuesday by the Cole County Circuit Court.

Pettis County Sheriff Emmett Fairfax, who captured the two fugitives on his mother's farm southeast of Sedalia following a two-day manhunt in the Smithton area, came here Tuesday to testify in Gaddis' jury trial.

Gaddis and Jim Hazelhorst, the other escapee, both took changes of venue from Saline County. Hazelhorst will appear for trial on April 6.

Gaddis, Hazelhorst and William Monteer, a former Sedalian, were accused of robbing a grocery store at the junction of I-70 and Highway 65, and the manhunt ensued after they wrecked their car in a high speed chase.

Monteer was sentenced to five years in prison late last year.

comes up with 20 per cent of a project's cost and the state supplies 25 per cent, the federal allotment will make up the other 55 per cent.

Another change the Senate made in the House version was to give the Department of Corrections $500,000 to provide the basic start on a maximum security prison estimated to cost an overall $7.3 million.

The House had approved only $60,000 for extra guards to keep tighter control over hard core inmates prison authorities feel should be in a maximum security institution. The Senate accepted the $60,000 allotment but specified it should be for guards, psychologists and psychiatrists.

The House will receive from the Senate a resolution setting April 7 as the date for a special referendum election on the income tax hike law.

The differences over appropriations and passage of the resolution could delay the end of this special session of the legislature until Thursday or possibly into next week. The session began Jan. 19.

Sex Films No Longer Shockers

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Is the sex revolution leveling off in movies?

There are some faint indications that such a trend is on the way. Not that filmmakers are turning away from sex; nudity and explicit love-making appear to be standard ingredients of the new cinema.

But sex in itself appears to be losing its capacity to shock. Since "I Am Curious (Yellow)," little remains that would startle an audience with frank depictions. Like all cinematic devices, nudity and steamy sex have been so overworked that they are almost cliches.

At least one young filmmaker believes that the recent emphasis on sex was the result of a wrong evaluation of the youthful audience by the film companies. Said he:

"Kids today don't go to the movies because they are sexy. The young people today have a franker, more realistic attitude toward sex than their parents had, and they are neither shocked nor obsessed by it.

"If a movie has sex, that's okay with them, as long as the sex is real and not thrown in for some phony reason. But they're more interested in politics and today's problems. Young people didn't flock to see 'Easy Rider' or 'Midnight Cowboy' because of the sex quotient; they went because of the themes of alienation and the search for identity.

"The older producers and directors would be making a mistake if they continued trying to aim sex pictures at the younger audience. They'd just be exposing their own sex hang-ups, which the kids today don't have."

Box office figures seem to support his thesis. In each New Year's anniversary edition, Variety reports its estimates of the rental returns on the previous year's movies. The figures are unofficial and do not reflect a film's long-range receipts. But they can be revealing.

The No. 1 moneymaker of 1969 was "The Love Bug," a Walt Disney movie which couldn't have offended anyone, except perhaps the competitors of Volkswagen. Variety figured that its domestic rentals—returns to the releasing company in the United States and Canada—were $17 million.

The runners-up: "Funny Girl," $16.5 million; "Bullitt," $16.4 million; "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid," $15 million; Romeo and Juliet," $14.5 million; "True Grit," $11.5 million; "Midnight Cowboy; $11 million; "Oliver" and "Goodbye, Columbus," $10.5 million apiece; "Chitty Chitty Bang Bang," $7.5 million.

Of the top 10, only "Midnight Cowboy" was rated X. "Goodbye, Columbus" had some frank passages, and there was a bedroom scene in "Bullitt" and even "Romeo and Juliet." "True Grit" featured some salty language. But most of the top 10 attractions of 1969 could be classed as family entertainment.

Republican Fete Featuring Agnew Changes Scene

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A $100-a-plate Republican fund-raising dinner to be addressed by Vice President Spiro T. Agnew will be held Feb. 10 at the St. Louis Arena instead of a hotel, dinner chairman Donald W. Douglas Jr. announced Tuesday.

Officials of the St. Louis Labor Council, AFL-CIO, had urged its member unions to picket the dinner at Stouffer's Riverfront Inn because the hotel's employes are not represented by a union. The Carpenters Union said it would station pickets at the hotel.

"Even though the legality of the threatened picket line is disputed," Douglas said, "there is no arguing the fact that there is a dispute . . . between Stouffer's and the union, or unions."

A Stouffer's spokesman said its employes voted against union representation in a Nov. 7 election supervised by the National Labor Relations Board and contends the unions are barred from further organizing activity for one year following the election.

"We booked the dinner with Stouffer's with no knowledge of a union problem," he added.

Stamp Dispenser Has Big Overflow

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP) — Ralph Hargrove deposited a nickel in the stamp dispenser in Augusta's main post office Tuesday and the machine didn't stop until it had spiled some 500 five-cent stamps onto the post office floor. That's 40 feet of postage.

Hargrove summoned a post office employe who rolled the stamps back into the dispenser. Then Hargrove asked the postman to sell him the five cent stamp the old fashioned way—by hand.

Movies Get Another Rating System

By DICK BIESER
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — After 15 months of what the film industry calls "gratifying success," its voluntary program of rating movies is being modified.

Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, said Tuesday one change was made becuase a survey had shown considerable confusion over the "M" rating —which meant a film was recommended for mature audiences only.

So that category is being dropped in favor of "GP." This means all ages may view the movie but that parental guidance or discretion is advised.

The other change raises the age limit for viewing films rated "R"—restricted category—without an accompanying parent or legal guardian from 16 to 17.

Both changes are effective March 1.

Observers said the boost in the age limit may represent an attempt to broaden the "R" rating to include racy but serious films heretofore relegated to the "X" category for adults only.

Valenti has said he originally intended the X to be a "Leper colony" for films of no artistic quality. But it hasn't worked out that way.

Two of the most successful and critically acclaimed films of 1969—"Midnight Cowboy and "Medium Cool"—ended up in the X class.

Here is the new set of standards:

G—All ages admitted.

GP—All ages admitted, but parental discretion recommended.

R—Anyone under 17 must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

X—No one under 18 admitted.

A survey conducted by the National Association of Theater Owners showed that 9 out of 10 theaters queried used the ratings in their advertising.

Valenti was joined in his announcement by Eugene Picker, president of the theater owners group, and Munio Podhorzer, a member of the governing board of the International Film Importers and Distributors of America.

Solo Flying Ace Cancels Journey

FARGO, Ga. (AP)—Solo pilot Max Conrad called off Tuesday his second attempt to fly around the world via both poles after inspecting his crippled aircraft.

He crash landed his Piper Azted Friday at the South Pole after taking off for Chile.

Conrad, 67, of Winona, Minn., told newsmen through a ham radio operator here that his plane "wasn't as badly damaged as it looks."

"But we can't make repairs at this time of year because of the weather, and I'm coming back to the United States," Conrad said. "That doesn't mean I've given up."

Conrad, who was not injured in the crash, became the first man to land a wheeled light aircraft at the polar Amundsen-Scott station last week.

Optimist Club Hears Songs By Notables

The Notables, comprised of Jim Edwards, director; Roylee Peters, Wendell Smith and the latest addition to the group, Larry Callis, presented the program Tuesday noon at the meeting of the Optimist Club held at Bothwell Hotel.

A varied program of vocal and instrumental music featured favorite numbers that began with "South of the Border" and ended with "God Bless America," with blues, spirituals and others included. The Notables, as always, were well received by their audience.

W. A. Ball, president, presided. J. W. Watts gave the invocation and Dr. D. C. Payne was program chairman.

Uncertain Footing

The bottom can fall out of the market, but when it falls out of a cattle truck, this is what happens. Several head of cattle were injured in Everett, Wash., recently when the floor of this truck dropped out while driving down a freeway at 50 miles per hour. Two cattle were killed later because of extensive injuries. (UPI)

Seeing Eye Cat Protects Owner

MEDFORD, Ore. (AP) — Cutie is a seeing eye cat.

The 20-pound Persian cat walks 2 feet in front of his partially blind owner, Mrs. Esther Downey Palmer. He rubs against Mrs. Palmer to warn her of an obstruction or depression ahead.

Indoors, Cutie pushes small objects such as dropped magazines out of Mrs. Palmer's path.

Mrs. Palmer, a retired World War I Army nurse who can distinguish only darks and lights, got 3-year-old Cutie when the animal was a kitten.

Cutie was not trained for his seeing eye job, but apparently sensed the need for his services.

Mastodon Chosen

FORT WAYNE, Ind. (AP) — Students at the Indiana-Purdue University regional campus here have chosen the mastodon, a hairy elephant-like animal which roamed North America during the Ice Age, as their school mascot.

"We'll be the only school with a mascot that's been dead for 10,000 years," said a member of the selection committee.

Mastodon skeletons have been found in the Fort Wayne area.

U.S. Inflation is Nearing The Rate in Argentina

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — It may be, as President Nixon suggested in his State of the Union message, that present inflation stems from past imbalances in federal budgets, but wasn't that a long, long time ago?

Regardless of who is to blame for the present economic imbalance, the President has the unenviable distinction of presiding over a nation whose rate of inflation 12 months after he took office nearly equaled that of Argentina.

This nation long has scorned the economics of Latin America, mainly because its nations, and underdeveloped lands elsewhere, sometims succumbed to the temptation of seeking growth through inflation.

Their experiences have been a lesson to many of these nations. Business investment stagnated, foreign debts because oppressive, speculation ran rampant. Even governments were overthrown before inflation was dethroned.

In the decade of the 1960s Argentina's inflation averaged 23 per cent a year, but by 1969 it had reduced the rate to 7.2 per cent. By coincidence, that is the same rate at which consumer inflation reduced American buying power last month.

The comparison led one large international bank to comment in a publication for its corporate customers and correspondents banks:

"While opinions in Latin America and Europe are turning away from inflation as a way of economic life, the attitudes of many people in the United States—outside of key administration officials—are going the opposite way."

If this is so, the challenge to the nation is clear, and judging by its determination to uproot the inflationary psychology through controls on spending, the government feels it is doing its share.

A restless feeling seems to be growing among critics, however, a hope that something other than a frontal assault might be considered by the administration in view of the fact that after 12 months of effort inflation is hot as ever.

Are there methods of dealing with inflation, they ask, other than to balance the budget and made money difficult to obtain? Is there an alternative to pushing the country headlong over the precipice of recession?

It is possible that government policy actually is fueling inflation? Is the soaring coast of shelter, for example, directly related to measures that have slowed the pace of housing construction?

Isn't there something to be learned by studying the market performance of key industries over the past decade or so and attempting to deal with these separately?

The soaring cost of medical care—up about 25 per cent in five years—is one of the more obvious instances of an area of the economy that is unlikely to respond to conventional anti-inflation measures.

The answer is undoubtedly complex, but the possibility that inflation will continue in medical services seems to be suggested by the inadequate number of doctors being graduated from the medical schools.

Isn't there something to be learned also by the fact that chemical prices rose sharply in the five years following World War II but have remained stable since then, even during inflation?

Why should there be upward pressure on prices in some metals industries, even in declining markets which, it is reasonable to assume, should encourage lower prices in an attempt to win new customers and save old business?

What are the causes of price increases during December in gasoline, cigarettes, newspapers, magazines and alcoholic drinks consumed away from home? Why should egg prices have taken off so suddenly?

If farm products are among those rising most swiftly in recent years, why is it that the farmer claims he isn't getting a proportionate share?

And if the lumber industry has modernized, why should the prices of lumber and wood products have risen more than 25 per cent in five years?

Senator Adams

In 1803, John Quincy Adams was elected to the U.S. Senate as a member of the Federalist party. However, he broke with his party and, in 1808, the Federalists elected another person to his place in the Senate, several months before the election was scheduled. Adams did not wait for the end of his term but resigned immediately.

Broken Clips on TV Trays Are Her Problem

By POLLY CRAMER

Polly's Problem

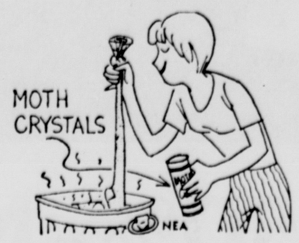
DEAR POLLY—Help! Please! My set of TV trays are the type with clips on the trays that attach to stands and the clips have broken. Does anyone know if these clips can be replaced? If so, what type of store would have them?—MRS. S. T.

DEAR POLLY—Julia B. can clean her atomizer by putting plain alcohol in it and then squirting a few times. A saleslady in a specialty shop told me this about a year ago. —RACHEL

DEAR POLLY—To eliminate odor in the garbage can, I pour ½-cup of moth crystals into the toe of an old nylon stocking, tie a large knot in the top of the stocking and hang it inside the can. The lid will keep the stocking with the knotted top from falling into the can.—ANN



DEAR POLLY—It pays to carry a plastic bag along with your camera that makes "instant" pictures, ready to catch all those discarded papers and negatives when a picture is taken. This saves making a mess and being a litterbug. Often there is no handy place to discard them quickly. I find food-sized bags work best.—MRS. D. B.

DEAR POLLY—Last summer, I had so many guests that I had to find a way to eliminate such great quantities of dishes after meals. At each person's place, I put two paper plates, one on top of the other. At dessert time, the lower plate was just put on top of the other one to eliminate confusion in a crowded space and save on dishwashing.—I. H. M.

POLLY'S NOTE: This would work fine if everyone licked his platter clean.

DEAR POLLY—I find that using two iced teaspoons to dip-drop cookies on the cookie sheet is much handier than using a teaspoon.—SUSAN

Upset By Grems Pushes Them Into Second Slot

By VAUGHN HART
Sports Editor

The Sacred Heart Gremlins virtually solidified at least a third place finish in the final standings of the Kaysinger Conference Tuesday night by upsetting the Cole Camp Blue Birds, 51-40 in Sedalia.

Coupled with the Warsaw loss to Lincoln, the Grems now stand tied in second place with the Wildcats at 4-1 in league play.

SHHS only has three conference games remaining: Northwest, Stover and Warsaw.

In the early going of the contest, it seemed as if it was going to be a long night for Coach Brosnahan's Gremlins as they fell behind, 7-1 with only three minutes gone in the initial quarter.

Cole Camp increased their lead by the end of the first half to 13-6.

The second stanza went much the same as did the first and by the end of the half, Sacred Heart was trailing, 27-19.

The locals could have stayed within closer striking distance in that first half, but could only find the range on five of 11 free throw tosses.

The second half was a complete turn-about from the first half play for Secred Heart.

Shooting only 25 percent from the field in the first two periods, the Grems were faced with a task that at some points seemed monumental.

In gaining their first half advantage, Cole Camp had hit at a clip of 44 percent of their field goal attempts.

Slowly but surely, Sacred Heart crept closer to the Blue Birds, on mostly timely shots from the field and near-perfect free throw shooting.

In the third quarter, the visitors could only muster one lone field goal.

By the end of the third stanza Sacred Heart had overcome a nine-point disadvantage at one point in the first half and took control of the game at the 2:01 mark of the third period, 30-29.

The fourth quarter was much the same as the third for the Grems; midway through the final period, SHHS was on top, 39-33.

The biggest factor for Sacred Heart came with less than five seconds gone in the fourth period.

At that point, Elroy Schumacher, the 6'5" pivot man for Cole Camp, committed his fifth foul of the game.

Schumacher, who has paced the Blue Birds through most of their contests this year, was held to only three total points due to Sacred Heart's sagging zone defense.

Jim Wanserski for Sacred Heart put on a flashing performance on defense; offensively the game scoring honors went to Ed Gonser with five field goals and ten freethrows.

Jim Wanserski added 12 in the winning Grems' effort.

Only one Cole Camp cager, Roger Williams, was able to hit in double figures; he tallied 11 to lead the Blue Birds in that department.

The Grems now stand at 4-1 in Kaysinger Conference action, while the ledger reads 13-6 in overall games. Their winning percentage on the overall season is the second best in the league.

Friday night the Grems face another Kaysinger league foe: Northwest. That game will be played on the road.

Two years ago when the Kansas City Chiefs basketball team came to Sedalia for the first time, the cost was only about $400.

Last year, the total cost involved was around $650; this year the Chiefs' roundball team will return to Sedalia, but the cost has almost doubled over last year's visit.

Chuck Stockstill, manager of the Sedalia Possum Trotters basketball team; signed the contract Tuesday with the Chiefs office in Kansas City to bring the cagers back for their third visit to this mid-Missouri city.

According to Stockstill, the cost of having the team here is $900 this year; this price is twice as much as in 1969.

In addition to the $900, there are many other costs involved.

First of all, the sponsor will have to pay 40 cents per mile for the round trip from Kansas City to Sedalia and back.

And then there is the cost of the Smith-Cotton gym, the referees, the printing of the tickets and posters, advertising, among many other minor incidentals.

Roughly speaking, according to Stockstill, the total cost will be around $1200 for this season's attraction in the S-C gym on Feb. 26.

After firming up the final plans Tuesday by phone to the Chiefs' office, the question was raised, "if any wives or girl friends of the Chiefs themselves come to Sedalia to watch the game, can they get in free?"

To this Stockstill replied, "with the cost of living now-a-days hitting everyone, I sincerely doubt it."

"The wives of our ball players will have to pay to see the game and the same will be true for you (Chiefs)," he concluded.

Leading the visiting lineup card will be defensive lineman Buck Buchanan; wide receiver Otis Taylor; backup quarterback Mike Livingston; linebacker Bobby Bell; offensive lineman Dave Hill and punter Jerrel Wilson. In addition, other players are expected to be here to "beef up" the Chiefs lineup.

In last year's contest, the professional football world champs were handed a 90-83 defeat at the hands of the host Trotters.

There is little doubt in anyone's mind who the champions of the football world are, but one thing is certain in the minds of Sedalia Possum Trotter fans, "they beat 'em last year and they can beat 'em again this year."

Tickets for the Feb. 26 contest will soon go on sale; seats this year will be two dollars each.

LaMonte Vikes Over-run Tigers For Loop Win

GREEN RIDGE — The Green Ridge Tigers lost another heartbreaker Tuesday night in front of their home fans to LaMonte, 66-56.

For the year, LaMonte holds a mark of 11-7 and 4-2 in Kaysinger Conference play.

Green Ridge is winless in six attempts in the league and holds a mark of 3-15 for the year.

Warren Ripley, Mark Jones and Rick Dillon all hit in double figures for the winning Vikings; Jimmie Hill, Scott Purchase and Jackie Stevens also netted in double figures for the losers.

Green Ridge salvaged the junior varsity game, but lost the volleyball tilt.

The score of the jayvee action was 45-44; the volleyball game ended at 29-24.

Camdenton, Versailles Get Advances

ELDON — Camdenton and Versailles advanced into the winning brackets of the Eldon Tournament Tuesday night.

Camdenton posted a ten-point win over Eugene, 56-46, while Versailles out-gunned Osage, 88-49.

Dan Cartwright led the Camdenton attack with 16, while S. Duenkel was tops for Eugene with 17.

Bill Laurie netted 37 points in the Versailles Tigers' win over Osage; Marriott and Anderson followed for the winners with 16 and 12 respectively.

Action in the tourney resumes Thursday night; the finals are set for Saturday night.

Seattle's Price Is High to Stay

BERKELEY, Calif. (AP) — Five and one-half million dollars — cold, hard cash in the bank—is what appears to be necessary to keep the Seattle Pilots baseball club from ignominiously leaving town after just one year there.

American League owners scheduled a second day of meetings here today, hoping to hear that a group of Seattle businessmen will be able to come up with that sum.

Those businessmen, though, will be in nearby San Francisco, running up a phone bill in a last, desperate attempt to get the money and keep the Pilots from moving to Dallas-Fort Worth or Milwaukee, whose representatives are on hand to move in for the kill if the Seattle bid fails.

It is clear the league owners want to keep the team in Seattle, if only to prevent a lawsuit that Mayor Wes Uhlman has threatened if they leave. But money was the problem when the meetings here started and it is the problem today.

The only real development after 10½ hours of meetings Tuesday was the reduction of the price of the Pilots.

In October the league approved a sale price of $10.3 million and the club was to be sold from Cleveland businessman William Daley to a group headed by Seattle businessmen Fred Danz and Edward Carlson.

But then it was learned that a $3.5 million bank loan given to the original ownership would come due if the club was sold. Danz and Carlson couldn't pay it and the present crisis arose.

Tuesday, Daley's group agreed to accept $9 million for the club, saying it was foregoing all profit in doing so.

But it was difficult to see how this would solve the problem of the $3.5 million bank loan.

In addition, the new owners will need at least $2 million to run the club next year, meaning at least $5.5 million is needed right away regardless of whatever long-term payment deal might be worked out with Daley.

And making the matter more difficult for Carlson and Danz is the time factor. With spring training less than a month away, the league must come to a final decision soon, though perhaps not at the present meetings.

"I would think they would have about a week," said Ewing Kauffman, Kansas City Royals owner who is chairman of a four-man committee considering the problem.

Carlson was hopeful he could find the necessary financing, even though he had not been able to do so in his attempts since August.

Almost lost in the shuffle was a proposal made earlier in the day by a group headed by Carlson and Danz that included Washington Gov. Daniel J. Evans and Seattle Mayor Wes Uhlman as well as other political figures.

They suggested turning the Pilots into a nonprofit civic organization with all profits to go to social, cultural and educational groups.

This idea appears not to have been taken seriously by the owners and Carlson said he was not surprised at this. League President Joe Cronin sounded skeptical from the start and he indicated the owners felt the same way.

Wesleyan Gets Third In League

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Kansas Wesleyan, Bethel, Friends and Bethany posted victories in Kansas Conference basketball games Tuesday night.

Kansas Wesleyan won its third northern division game against no defeats with a 70-60 triumph over Ottawa, 1-2. Wesleyan's Dave McMullen and Ottawa's Larry Lawrence each scored 28 points.

Bethel, 3-1, edged Southwestern 71-68 in a southern division clash. Bruce Ediger scored 23 and his brother, Darrell, 17, for the Threshers, 3-1. Barry Avers had 12 for the Moundbuilders, winless in three KCAC games.

Bethany, led by Eugene Thomas' 26 points and Dale Gorsky's 24, downed McPherson 96-89. Hal Wright tallied 19 and Jim Mowry 18 for the Bulldogs. Both teams have 1-2 records in the northern division.

Friends bumped College of Emporia 78-64 in a southern division contest.

St. Mary of the Plains bashed Sterling 111-87 in a game that did not count in the standings. Sterling's Lonnie Kruse scored 30 points. Bill Leary had 28 and Allen Waller 25 for the Cavaliers.

St. Benedict's used superior height to shell Emporia State 76-56 in a non-conference affair. Steve Northcraft scored 21 and Chick Downing 20 to spark the Ravens to their eighth victory against five defeats. John Henderson had 18 for the Hornets, 2-13.

In games involving Missouri teams, Evangel bombed Central Methodist 110-73, Southwest Baptist nipped Missouri Western 64-62 and Pershing, Neb. turned back Tarkio 66-60.

'Cats Fall to Lincoln

LINCOLN — First there were two and now there is only one; one team at the top of the Kaysinger Conference race.

That spot now belongs to the Lincoln Cardinals due to their 78-58 drubbing of Warsaw in Lincoln Tuesday night.

Warsaw stands at 4-1 in league play and is tied with the Gremlins of Sacred Heart for the runner-up honor in the nine-team loop.

The Lincoln Cardinals stand at the top of the pile with an undefeated mark in five conference games and for the year they have forged out an impressive 19-2 record.

Jim Eken turned in another outstanding performance for Coach Larry Hagedorn's Cards.

The 6'4" center pumped in 35 points and had control of the boards throughout the game.

Teammate Ron Hansen netted 18 points and Bruce Rigby tossed through 11.

Sam Henderson was the only Wildcat player to hit in double figures with a total of 16.

Lincoln has three remaining conference games.

Friday night they travel to Cole Camp and round out conference play later in the season with Green Ridge and LaMonte.

Warsaw is not out of the conference race for the loop's crown, but they will have to win the rest of their league games and hope someone can knock off the hot Cards' squad, to even gain a tie for top honors.

Owens' is Shaded in Opening Draft Round by Terry Bradshaw

NEW YORK (AP) — Pro football's draft resumed today following an opening session that put Terry Bradshaw in position to challenge O.J. Simpson's record $300,000 contract and sent Steve Owens scurrying back to his agent for a quick recount.

Bradshaw and Owens, the two most heralded members of college football's elite, wound up in substantially different negotiating stances Tuesday as the 26 pro football teams drafted the first 182 of 442 players to be taken in the two-day selection session.

Bradshaw, a blond 6-foot-3 Little All-America quarterback from Louisiana Tech, established himself as a strong threat to take a crack at Simpson's contract record when he was made the No. 1 selection in the entire draft by the Pittsburgh Steelers.

Owens, the Heisman Trophy winning running back from Oklahoma, lost a good deal of his luster when he wasn't picked until the Detroit Lions tapped him No. 19 in the first round—after three other running backs had been selected.

The contract target for the outstanding collegians was set last year by Simpson, the Heisman Trophy winner from Southern California who signed with the Buffalo Bills for $210,000 in salary, a $100,000 loan and some $25,000 in performance clauses.

Despite the latest developments, however, neither was issuing detailed contract positions although Owens, who watched the proceedings in person at the draft headquarters in the Belmont Plaza Hotel in midtown Manhattan, did say:

"I'm not concerned that much about money. I'm interested in playing football. Then the monetary phase will take care of itself. All I want to do is go out and play and be successful."

But he did speculate that unjustified criticism of his speed and blocking ability might have been the reason for his low selection.

"I think things have been said that are unjustified," he said. "It bothers me—people saying things they don't know too much about. But it all boils down to performance. The only way to prove people wrong is to perform."

Bradshaw, who was at his home in Shreveport, La., when he became the first No. 1 pick taken from a small school since Kansas City tapped defensive tackle Buck Buchanan from Grambling in 1963, took the first news of his selection modestly.

"I hope and pray I can live up to everybody's expectations," he said. "I'm really proud and thrilled. It's unbelievable to be selected first. I had a nervous sweat waiting for the phone to ring."

But when he was asked if he thought the Steelers, who have three other quarterbacks, might trade him to another club he seemed to change just a bit.

"They seemed," he said, "to be real excited about having me. If they want to get rid of me, fine. But they didn't give me any indication that they were going to trade me."

The Steelers weren't giving any indication of that, either.

"He's a dedicated young man," said Coach Chuck Noll. "We made the decision on him as the best player in the draft. This is not a reflection on our people, just an analysis of the draft as it stands."

An analysis of the draft also showed the following after the first day:

—Offensive and defensive players were almost equally desired, although the No. 1 commodity seemed to be linemen and defensive backs. Offensively, 31 linemen were selected and defensively 32 were taken, while 34 defensive backs were chosen.

—Five trades were completed with the Chicago Bears again emphasizing established talent against the risk of selecting youthful help in the draft.

—The pro scouts reached out to tap players from colleges that normally do not figure early and reached beyond the United States for four players from the Canadian Leagues.

A complete breakdown of the first day's draft showed 90 offensive players, 89 defensive players and three kicking specialists chosen. Running backs were the big premium offensively after linemen with 18 picked, followed by 13 wide receivers, 6 tight ends and 5 quarterbacks. Besides the backs and linemen on defense, 23 linebackers were selected.

That emphasis on linemen was reflected quickly on the first round. After Pittsburgh took Bradshaw, Green Bay selected Notre Dame's huge defensive tackle, Mike McCoy. Cleveland then tapped the other highly rated quarterback, Mike Phipps of Purdue, and then Boston and Buffalo went back to picking off defensive linemen.

The Patriots took Phil Olsen, a defensive tackle from Utah State who is the little brother of Merlin Olsen of the Los Angeles Rams, and the Bills picked Al Cowlings, a defensive end from Southern California.

Other linemen picked on the first round were Penn State defensive tackle Mike Reid by Cincinnati, North Texas State defensive end Cedric Hardman by San Francisco, North Carolina Central guard Doug Wilderson by Houston, Texas defensive tackle Bob McKay by Cleveland, Oklahoma State tackle John Ward by Minnesota and USC tackle Sid Smith by Kansas City.

In the other interesting development, the three running backs drafted ahead of Owens were Larry Stegent of Texas A&M by St. Louis, Bob Anderson of Colorado by Denver and Norm Bulaich of TCU by Baltimore.

In the trades, Cleveland sent quarterback Jerry Rhome to Houston for a draft choice. Dallas sent running back Craig Baynham and defensive back Phil Clark to Chicago for a draft choice. Houston sent safety W.K. Hicks to the New York Jets for a draft choice, Baltimore sent linebacker Dennis Gaubatz to Washington for defensive tackle Frank Bosch and a draft choice and Atlanta sent defensive tackle Jerry Shay to the New York Giants for a draft choice.

The Bears, in acquiring Baynham and Clark gave up their second round draft choice. They previously had traded their No. 1 to Green Bay for three other veterans—linebacker Lee Roy Caffey, center Bob Hyland and running back Elijah Pitts.

In addition to Bradshaw and Wilkerson, one other player from a school which normally doesn't figure early was chosen on the first round—Rich McGeorge, a tight end from Elon, taken by the Packers.

And before the first day was over four Canadian League performers had been selected—wide receiver Margene Adkins by Dallas, wide receiver Vic Washington by San Francisco, running back Jim Evenson by Pittsburgh and defensive back Jake Scott by Miami.

Smith, Glosson Head K.C. List

KANSAS CITY (AP) — The Kansas City Chiefs, feeling satisfied they got what they need to plug reserve holes in their championship football team, went looking for diamonds in the rough today.

Seven of the 17 rounds of pro football's annual college player draft are complete. The Chiefs, and other pro teams, generally feel any prospect drafted lower than seventh who makes the grade is strictly a bonus.

"I think we helped ourselves the best possible way we could," Coach Hank Stram said. The Chiefs claimed rights to seven players Tuesday, ranging from their No. 1 pick, massive offensive tackle Sid Smith of Southern California to wispish wide receiver Clyde Glosson of Texas-El Paso, the No. 7 selection.

"When you draft as low as we did," Stram added, "you have to draft for quality and pick to meet your needs. It was a combination of trying to get the best athletes at positions where we needed help. The people we took we feel fill this requirement."

The Chiefs wanted a talented offensive lineman who could serve basically as a backup tackle, but also fill in at guard or even center. They got that man in Smith, a 6-foot-4½, 264-pound second team All-America who underwent knee surgery Nov. 28 but is reported completely healed.

"Basically, we will use him as an offensive tackle or guard," Stram said. "But there's always the possibility we will take a look at him at center. He's got excellent speed and quickness and great versatility."

Stram also wants a sixth linebacker, having carried only five in 1969. He picked Clyde Werner on the second round, a 6-3, 225-pounder from the University of Washington, who missed the last six games of last season with a neck injury but also is reported healthy again.

The Chiefs wanted some quality depth in the defensive line to support Jerry Mays, Buck Buchanan, Curley Culp and Aaron Brown. So, they took Billy Bob Barnett, 6-5, 238-pounder from Texas A&M, who Stram compares with another Aggie product, Mo Moorman.

Stram also wanted backup strength in the defensive secondary, which will be missing Goldie Sellers, moved to wide receiver. He got David Hadley, a 5-9, 186-pounder from Alcorn A&M in Mississippi, who resembles 1969 rookie star James Marsalis in style.

The Chiefs also took center Mike Oriard, a 6-4, 233-pound product of Notre Dame.

Pittman Is Picked By Cards

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Cardinals had their eye on Larry Stegent of Texas A&M all along but were surprised and pleased to get Penn State's Charlie Pittman in Tuesday's rounds of the professional football draft.

Selecting eighth among 26 teams in the opening go-round, the Cardinals raised eyebrows by tabbing the 6-foot-1, 195-pound Stegent over two more heralded running backs.

Two rounds later the Cardinals surveyed the list of players drafted and eagerly claimed Pittman, who ranked second only to Lennie Moore in Penn State rushing totals.

Cardinal Coach Charley Winner said Stegent, a speedster chosen over Oklahoma Heisman Trophy winner Steve Owens and Colorado All-American Bob Anderson, is "what we think of as a complete back."

"He has the speed to go outside and strength to break tackles. He's also an excellent pass receiver. He has more speed outside than Owens or Anderson. Everybody tells us that's what we need."

In Youngstown, Ohio, where he was attending the funeral of a teammate killed in an automobile accident, an exuberant Stegent called it "unbelievable.

"It's really beautiful," he said. "I am very happy to be with St. Louis. I really didn't have any idea that I would be picked this high."

Between the selection of Stegent and Pittman, the Cardinals fortified their defense and their offensive line with 6-3, 240-pound linebacker Jim Corrigall of Kent, Ohio, State and Charles Hutchison, a 6-3, 230-offensive guard from Ohio State.

"We're especially pleased to get Corrigall," Winner said. "He's big, he's aggressive and we've been told he's a real head-hunter out there."

Other Cardinal choices were defensive back Eric Harris of Colorado, defensive tackle Greg Lens of Trinity, Tex., linebacker Don Parish of Stanford, tackle Tom Lloyd of Bowling Green, defensive back Barry Pierson of Michigan, tackle James Manuel of Toledo and tight end Jim McFarland of Nebraska.

Owens Lets Words Fly At Writers

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Heiseman Trophy winner Steve Owens, obviously upset about being the 19th choice in Tuesday's first round football draft, made his final amateur appearance before the home folks Tuesday night.

Owens arrived late from New York for the Oklahoma City Press Club's annual dinner, but when the University of Oklahoma star got there he had some strong things to say.

"I read some stories while I was back East that said I couldn't block," said Owens. "One of them even said I couldn't outrun my grandmother."

"I am very happy to have been drafted by Detroit. I want to prove to a lot of people I can out-run my grandmother.

"As soon as this is over, I'm going back home, and race her," said Owens with a smile.

Owens, a six-foot-two by 215-pound tailback, holds the all-time NCAA records for rushing and scoring. He was selected the outstanding college football player of 1969, but 18 teams drafted college players Tuesday before one took Owens.

Big Pot Party

Mexican army troops stoke a bonfire consisting of several tons of marijuana as Mexico's winter campaign against narcotics gets underway. The smoky bonfire, which came as a highlight of U.S. Deputy Attorney Gen. # Israelis Bombard Egyptians

TEL AVIV (AP) — Israeli planes attacked two Egyptian army camps in the Nile Delta south of Cairo today, the Israeli military command announced.

The raiding jets hit the El-Muadi army camp six miles south of Cairo and a base at Dahshur, eight miles south of Helwan, a spokesman said.

He reported all the planes returned safely.

It was Israel's sixth strike into the delta region in six weeks.

An Egyptian military spokesman said the Israeli jets raided Maadi and Dahshur, on the west bank of the Nile about 12 miles south of Cairo. He reported three people were killed and 12 wounded.

Heavy antiaircraft fire was heard in the Egyptian capital for about 15 minutes, and the electric supply was cut for about 20 minutes in many parts of the city. Egypt's official Middle East News Agency said the raid was made by four Israeli jets.

The Israeli command also took a representative of the foreign press, Bill Seamans of the American Broadcasting Co., to the Israeli military headquarters in the Sinai desert, at Nahal Dikla, to check on Egypt's claim that its commandos had destroyed "most of the encampment and equipment" and killed a large number of Israeli soldiers in a raid early Tuesday.

Seamans said he found one shell hole inside the camp's barbed wire but "saw no indication of any other military action having taken place." He said life at the base appeared normal, no one seemed to have been injured and no special precautions were being taken.

The Israeli command had announced that "some improvised bazooka rockets" had been fired at Nahal Dikla and "caused no damage or casualties whatsoever."

In Paris, Premier Jacques Chaban-Delmas said if Libya sends to the Israeli front any of the Mirage jets it is buying from France, the French government will embargo the undelivered balance of the 100-plane order. But he said his government has no reason to doubt the Libyan regime's assurances that the Mirages won't be transferred.

Chaban-Delmas also revealed in a television interview that the Libyan and French governments soon will open talks to work out major economic deals, including construction of ships and petrochemical plants and French aid in agriculture and technical training.

French Foreign Minister Robert Schumann told newsmen in Paris nothing France did could affect the interests of her partners in the Libyan oil fields. U.S. interests control about 80 per cent of the huge Libyan output.

Josef Kapelner, chief representative in Switzerland of Israel's El Al Airline, said today that the shipment of American airplane spare parts seized in transit in Geneva Tuesday was routed through Switzerland by mistake.

He said the shipment originated in New York, was checked by customs authorities in Amsterdam, and conformed to Dutch transit rules which differ from the Swiss.

"Somebody there, either the forwarding agent or the cargo handler, put it on the next Tel Aviv plane—which happened to go through Geneva," Kapelner continued. "Obviously they did not know about the Swiss transit rules, and that's where the mistake was made.

"There was nothing hidden anywhere, nor was there any attempt to cover up. Now the matter is entirely in the hands of the Swiss authorities. We asked for return of the shipment, and there is nothing more we can do."

Magazine Companies Investigated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Fred B. Rooney said today a federal grand jury is being convened to examine sales practices of five magazine subscription agencies.

Rooney, a Pennsylvania Democrat whose office has been conducting its own investigation of magazine sales, said the grand jury would meet in Des Moines, Iowa, on Feb. 17. He said the jury probe will center on five subsidiaries of Cowles Communications, Inc.

A Justice Department spokesman, however, declined to pinpoint Cowles as the target of the investigation.

"The department is looking into magazine subscription sales generally and possible violation of postal regulations," he said. "It may involve Cowles but it could be much broader."

A spokesman for Cowles Communications said today that "recent attacks upon magazine subscription selling practices have put dozens of franchise dealers out of business. Hundreds of other small independent businessmen who sell magazines for a living have suffered severe business reversals and loss of reputation. Publishers also have been badly hurt by these attacks.

"This grand jury investigation could help everyone if it clears the vast majority of people engaged in this business who have been penalized by unwarranted, baseless charges and accusations."

In a statement, Rooney said the sales organizations to be probed, all headquartered in Des Moines and conducting business nationwide, are Civic Reading Club, Home Reader Service, Educational Book Club, Mutual Readers League and Home Reference Library.

The Mutual Readers League was the subject of a recent article in The Sunday Democrat-Capital, exposing some of the questionable methods employed by salesmen to obtain contracts.

He said his investigation centered on such practices as:

—Altering the terms of a contract without telling the subscriber.

—Using coupon payment books containing more coupons than the number of payments to be made under terms of the contract.

—Misrepresenting the price or the reason for the price of magazines.

—Entering names on contracts without the subscribers' knowledge.

—Inducing minors, illiterates, mentally retarded and blind persons to purchase subscriptions.

In addition, Rooney said his probe had prompted the Federal Trade Commission to make an extensive nationwide investigation of deceptive practices in magazine selling. "I expect the FTC will file formal actions against a number of major subscription sales agencies," he said.

Injuries Are Fatal

Mrs. VanPelt was injured Sunday in a car-truck collision in Liberty, Mo. Three other persons were hurt.

Regional Planning Listings

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes today designated 15 regional planning commissions as clearing houses to review projects under 51 federally sponsored programs.

The action was required by the Bureau of the Budget, which has ruled projects must be approved by the clearing houses before being submitted to federal agencies.

The Missouri Department of Community Affairs will act as the state clearing house on such projects.

Gene Sally, department director, said "when used judiciously by the state and local governments, as well as the regional bodies, the process can result in more expeditious, more effective and more economical development of our state."

Here are the 15 regional commissions and their directors:

Asks Review Of Automaker Pollution Case

NEW YORK (AP) — The city has asked the U.S. Supreme Court to review a case in which automobile manufacturers were charged with suppressing plans to reduce car exhaust pollution.

"If the allegations in the government's complaint are true," said J. Lee Rankin, the city's corporation counsel, "the automobile industry has knowingly contributed to air pollution and probably to impairing the health of millions of people."

The case was an antitrust suit which involves General Motors, Ford, Crysler, and the Automobile Manufacturers Association.

Last fall, before trial, the U.S. Justice Department and the industry negotiated a consent decree, under which the defendants, without admitting any violation of law, agreed to discontinue alleged collusive practices.

Rankin said the city will file another suit for triple damages inflicted on the city and its residents if the Supreme Court finds that the manufacturers violated the law.

Election Expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — W.D. Farr, a Greeley, Colo., feeder, was expected to be named today as president of the American National Cattlemen's Association as the 6,500 - member group winds up its four-day annual convention here.

Farr will succeed Bill House, Cedar Vale, Kan., who is completing a two-year term as head of the organization. Farr has served as first vice president and his election as president is considered automatic.

Waterfowl Are Counted In Missouri

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — A five-day winter survey on waterfoul recently conducted by the Missouri Conservation Department and agents of the U.S. Sport Fisheries and Wildlife Bureau, produced this census:

About 355,000 ducks, 95 per cent mallards, and 122,000 geese 80 per cent Canadas. The census takers also saw 1,650 coots and two swans.

To make the survey they traveled more than 12,500 miles by boat, car, truck and airplane, part of the while in sub zero weather.

Conservation crews also counted eagles and found 399 in Missouri.

They included 223 adult and 116 immature bald eagles, 10 adult and six immature golden eagles and 44 others not identified by species.

Wayne E. Sanders, U. S. Game Management agent, said the count was three less than last year and the ratio of immature to adult birds indicated poor reproduction. There was some fear expressed that pesticides could be blamed, the conservation department reported.

'Section Eights' Less in Vietnam

LONG BINH, Vietnam (Ar , — The U.S. Army's chief psychiatrist in Vietnam says "psychiatric casualties" are significantly less in the Vietnam war than they were in Korea and World War II.

These are soldiers with military psychiatric disorders who once were called "shell-shocked" or "section eights."

Col. Thomas B. Murray also says marijuana, which never became a big issue in previous wars, is an "important problem and the command recognizes it . . . It loosens you up and guys become psychotic."

He reported that a sampling of 500 troops arriving in Vietnam and 500 others leaving showed that 30 per cent of each group had used marijuana before coming here. Of those leaving 16 per cent said they used marijuana for the first time while in Vietnam.

"So often we see a soldier is psychotic and he has a history of using marijuana," he observed.

On the general subject of disability Murray said in an interview:

"Everybody seems to agree that psychiatric casualties are significantly less in this war than they were in the past two wars where we had records. And this is probably true. It's hard to judge because terminology changes.

"The rate was about 100-plus psychiatric casualties per thousand troops per year in World War II, 35 to 40 troops per thousand in Korea, and is around 10 to 12 troops per thousand men here currently.

"Of all those troops that come to psychiatric attention, only a very small per cent are evacuated from Vietnam."

He sets many reasons for the reduction.

"There are changes that take place," he said, "trends in administrative disposition and medical disposition and also having to do with our knowledge and our ability, a more sophisticated approach to it.

"The most significant factor in the reduction of psychiatric casualties, I think, is a combination of two general things and that is the relative excellence of the soldier himself and the mentally healthy environment in which he works..

He finds today's soldier is smarter, better trained, with better leadership. Other factors:

—The soldier is on a fixed 12-month tour, thus knows when he is going home and has something to look forward to.

—He can expect rapid medical evacuation if wounded, and quick reinforcement if his unit comes under attack; abundant helicopters have added mobility.

—Except for instances such as Khe Sanh and Con Thien, troops are usually not under sustained shelling attacks as in earlier wars. They are not subjected to attacks by bombers.

"The idea is to evacuate a man as a last resort rather than as a first resort," Murray said. "The idea is to treat him as far forward as possible. By example, a battalion surgeon at a fire base can give a man a sedative. If he's really upset they can send him to the nearest medical clearing company, put him to bed overnight and snow him a night or two with tranquilizers.

"And you keep him forward so he keeps his identity with unit. He retains his present, or an on-going feeling in membership in the group or community. That's a terribly important thing because that's the way you and I survive, I mean through our membership in whatever unit we're in."

Murray said there is another side to all this:

"While the number of evacs is not great, they're really very sick guys. I'm wondering if we quit calling them schizophrenic and got back to calling them combat fatigue, if it would have any difference on the evacuation rate."

Murray said the 20 military psychiatrists in Vietnam are sophisticated in evaluation from the professional standpoint.

"So that when a man is called schizophrenic, he probably is, but I'm not sure. What I'm thinking about is just cutting out the category for say three months. Don't call anyone schizophrenic, let somebody else call them that. If you think they need to be evacuated, fine, but don't give them that label. Call them combat exhaustion and see what happens to the evacuation rate.

"My guess is that med evacs (medical evacuations) would drop off significantly, because you respond to the name. If you put a certain name on something your expectations change."

He defined schizophrenia as not really what is popularly thought of as a split personality, but rather as a "split between a person's thinking and feeling."

Murray says psychiatrists are "people, too," and they can overreact by such statements as, "If you've got bad enough delusions, man, I'll get you out of here," or "Tell me about those voices."

Murray, 46, is from Grand Island, Neb.

Hindu Cults Growing in the U.S.

NEW YORK (AP) — Midafternoon in the hurrying crowd, six young men in long saffron and white robes, their heads shaved, sway past Saks Fifth Avenue begging with extended conch shells and chanting to their Lord Krishna.

Sunday when the drug and crime infested East Village is sleeping off another Saturday night, young people in a walk-up second-floor storefront quietly dress multicolored wooden dieties and prepare food for a Sunday feast in honor of their Lord Krishna.

A 17-year old boy shaves off his long shaggy hair and leaves his home and parents in suburban Long Island to serve his new Lord Krishna.

Lord Krishna is the god of the International Society for Krishna Consciousness, which claims to have temples in more than 20 locations in the country.

The new Western cult serving an ancient Hindu diety is part of a growing interest among young people of Eastern philosophies —and Eastern ways of life— which stress spiritual experience rather than material concerns. In recent years there has been a growth in the United States in devotees of yoga, of interest in Zen Buddhism, in Indian music and the wearing of Eastern garb.

Krishna devotees are mostly in their late teens and early 20s. Many were hippie-types; some were drug users.

"We're not going to get the Midwestern college kid," said Chandan Acuarya, a member of the East Village temple. "We're going to get the kid with the long hair who has sensed that it is a money-grabbing world."

Chandan, 22, was formerly Christian Kindler, a rock musician and commercial writer in Montreal. "I was making all kinds of money, but I was going out of my mind," he said. "That's why I'm here."

The key to the new Hindu cult is the chanting of the ancient 16-word mantra: "Hare Krishna, Hare Krishna, Krishna Krishna, Hare Hare, Hare Rama, Hare Rama, Rama Rama, Hare Hare."

"This is the authorized process by which one can develop an unalloyed love of god—god realization," said Brahmananda, president of the New York temple. "This chanting establishes a link between the living entity and the absolute truth."

Translated, the Hare Krishna asks: "Krishna, Oh my Lord, give me relief from illusion of this world and attraction to the material world. Bring me to serve you."

The colorful Sunday feast draws many more people than the 30 some devotees.

Then a crowd of young people flock to the temple. Some are attracted to the cult's philosophy; some are curious; some come for the free meal.

Chanting begins softly as burning incense coils a thin smoke throughout the room. One robed devotee, tinkling finger cymbals, rises slowly and sways before the flower-decked altar.

A brief sermon informs the visitors of the values of Krishna consciousness. "Transcendental bliss" can be theirs, they are told.

Then the rugs are rolled and devotees and vistors settle down for a vegetarian feast. Some visitors linger and go out into the street chanting and begging with the robed devotees.

But for the initiates, Krishna Consciousness is more than a Sunday lark.

It is a way of life founded in 1966 when Swami A.C. Bhaktiudanta arrived from the East with what he said was the "divinely appointed task" of carrying to the West the prescibed method for devoting to God—the chanting of the Hare Krishna. He set himself up in a lower Eastside storefront. The curious came; some remained; and the temple was founded.

Krishna life is highly regulated for all followers. Beginning at 5 a.m., their day is crammed with devotions, ritual cleaning of themselves and the temple, other chores and chanting and begging in the streets.

Following the law of the Vedic scriptures, they give up all intoxicants, drugs, alcohol, coffee and tea, abstain from sex except for procreation within a Krishna marriage, avoid gambling; and don't eat meat, fish and eggs.

Financial Bind Hits Episcopal Seminaries

NEW YORK (AP) — The Episcopal Church will close at least six of its 11 seminaries because they have been reduced to "begging for money . . . simply to keep their doors open," a church official says.

The Rev. Almus M. Thorp Sr., executive director of the church's Board for Theological Education, disclosed the reduction of seminaries in a sermon Sunday.

He said the seminaries, which range in enrollment from 200 students each at General Seminary in New York City and the Episcopal Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va., to 32 students at Bexley Hall in Rochester, N.Y., sought funds one Sunday a year to keep open.

Another problem, Thorp said, was "too few seminarians in too many schools." During the last decade enrollment at the 11 schools remained about 1,000, he said.

It was not immediately clear which seminaries would close under the reduction plan.

The Board of Theological Education has recommended reducing the number of seminaries from 11 to five or less, Thorp said.

He said the seminaries were aware of the plan and were prepared to carry it out "with dispatch."

There are about 3 million Episcopalians in the United States. Thorp said they had more per capita seminaries than other Protestant groups because "we're about 50 years behind."

Thorp delivered his sermon at St. James' Church on Madison Avenue.

Dinner Will Kick Off Heart Fund Campaign

The 1970 Heart Fund Campaign here will be launched with a dinner at 7:30 p.m., Friday at the Holiday Inn, it was announced today by Nevin Almquist, Heart Fund campaign chairman.

The campaign will continue through February. Sedalia's goal is $7,000, as compared with $6,500 realized in the 1969 campaign. The funds will be used to support expanded research, education and community service programs of the Pettis County Heart Association.

Dr. Graham Clark

Featured speaker at the kickoff event will be Dr. Graham Clark, an alumnus of Georgia Tech. Dr. Clark is president of the board of the Missouri Heart Association and also vice-president of the American Heart Association; chairman of the Great Plains region of the American Heart Association; a member of executive committee and fund raising advisory and policy committee of the board of the American Heart Association; Heart Fund chairman of Missouri from 1957-69; chairman of the fund raising advisory and bequest committees, and a member of the executive, budget and finance committees for the Missouri Heart Association.

Dr. Clark has been president of the School of the Ozarks since 1952.

The first campaign activity, Almquist said, will be a business block canvass known as "Heart-Days-for-Business," which will start Feb. 1. Directing the appeal as chairman is Dick Ink, manager of Kroger's Family Center.

The campaign will climax the weekend of Heart Sunday, Feb. 22, when approximately 400 volunteers will distribute heart-saving information and receive Heart Fund contributions.

Shaw Judge Cleared Of Charges

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — The judge who presided at the Clay Shaw trial has been declared innocent of charges that he supplied sex movies and women for a stag party.

Judge Edward A. Haggerty Jr., 56, was acquitted Monday night on charges of soliciting for prostitution, obscenity and resisting arrest.

Spectators in the courtroom cheered the verdict by one of Haggerty's colleagues on the Criminal District Court, Judge Matthew S. Braniff. He heard the case without a jury.

It was in Criminal District Court before Judge Haggerty that Shaw, a retired New Orleans businessman, was found innocent last March of a charge by Dist. Atty. Jim Garrison that he conspired to assassinate President John F. Kennedy.

In Haggerty's own trial, Braniff ruled that the Dec. 17 stag party, at a midtown motel, actually was a private gathering and that police had no "probable cause" to raid it.

Brewer S. Pence, a police undercover agent who has a son on the vice squad, attended the party wearing a tiny radio transmitter with a microphone hidden under his tie. It broadcast conversations to police outside.

But Judge Braniff ruled that the police had not obtained court authorization for electronic eavesdropping and therefore it was illegal.

Pence testified that Judge Haggerty brought in a sack of sex films and when he discovered that the "chairman of the girlie committee" had fallen down on the job, he went out and brought back three women.

Kenneth A. Reeves, an accountant, said it was a private bachelor party organized for him by friends prior to his wedding.

Chamber Banquet Talk By Former Congressman

Calvin D. Johnson, former member of the House of Representatives, will be guest speaker at the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet to be held at 6:30 p.m., March 12, at the Smith-Cotton High School cafeteria, it has been announced by Chuck Lawrence, executive manager of the Chamber.

Long a popular speaker at civic affairs, Johnson is consultant on public affairs for the American Trucking Association, and director of customer relations for the Remington Rand Corp.

Educated in Illinois, Johnson served six years in the Illinois General Assembly before election to Congress in 1942. He was also a member of the Illinois General Assembly.

In his announcement of the plans for this year's banquet, Lawrence said of the guest speaker: "His deep understanding of the problems and issues of our times, and the constructive program he advocates makes him one of the five most popular guest speakers of our time."

Calvin Johnson

Lawrence pointed out that this year's banquet should be one of the best, with over 600 persons expected to attend.

Tickets may be ordered through the Chamber office at 113 East Fourth.

BUSINESS NEWS

Clinton Black was re-elected to the board of directors of First State Savings for a three-year term at the annual stockholders meeting of the association held Monday.

Following the stockholders meeting, the board reorganized with the same officers: J. E. Mitchell, president; Henry C. Salveter, Clinton Black and Richard Trueman, vice-presidents, and K. U. Love, treasurer.

Other officers of the association named for the first time were Mrs. Winona Gerling, vice-president and manager of Clinton branch; Donald Braden, vice-president and manager of the Warrensburg branch; George Meuschke, assistant vice-president and manager of the Marshall branch; Mrs. Emma Lee Miller, assistant secretary and assistant manager of the Marshall branch, and Mrs. Beatrice Beard, vice-president and personnel officer.

Following the reorganization, President Mitchell presented a detailed report on First State Savings Association operations during the past year, when the growth was $3,569,847. He stated dividends on savings amounted to more than $1 million and total reserves are now more than $1.5 million.

During the year money was made available for area people to purchase 45 new homes, 193 existing homes, plus financing for apartments, shopping centers and other types of real estate.

He pointed out that new dividend rate limits announced last week by the Federal Home Loan Bank Board will provide a broad basis of savings plans and should create more mortgage funds for the association.

Says Blacks Partial To Segregation

WASHINGTON (AP) — One of the top-ranking blacks in the Nixon administration says the government should stop emphasizing programs to move Negroes out of the ghettos.

"After all, what's so great about white folks that you want to live next to them," said Benjamin F. Holman in an interview. "It's condescending and paternalistic."

Holman, the South Carolina-born, New Jersey-reared director of the Justice Department's Community Relations Service, said he has been accused of heresy to the civil rights cause since he first expounded his views last year.

"Where integration will work, I'm all for it," Holman said. "But the fact is integration has not worked."

Therefore, Holman said, it is more important for the nation to redirect its priorities to improve the quality of life, especially education, in the inner cities.

"What we need," he said, "is to uplift the masses by redirecting our resources to provide jobs, education, decent housing and health facilities for those who are forced to live, out of economic necessity, in our inner cities."

Holman said he was not advocating the government drop all its efforts to insure blacks an equal place in the nation, rather he favors "going full speed ahead to secure full legal rights for all minorities to full opportunities."

Suburban Merger Downed by Voters

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Residents of the St. Louis County village of St. John voted overwhelmingly Tuesday against merging with the adjacent city of Overland.

The proposal was approved in Overland, but a majority was needed in both communities for passage of the consoliation proposal.

The St. John vote was 1,763 against and only 517 for the merger.

Having 'Identity Crisis' Is Mark of Real Comer

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP) — Have you had an identity crisis lately?

Well, if not then you don't belong with the real swinging set.

An identity crisis occurs when someone who knew for sure, or thought he did, who or what he was suddenly becomes a stranger to himself. The affliction has become as common in these confusing times as the common cold.

When you are gripped by an identity crisis, you become pitifully indecisive.

In the morning you stare in the mirror at the face you are shaving and question, "Is that really me, or some imposter who has stolen inside the real me?"

Although undergoing an identity crisis is personally unnerving, it is somewhat like having a baby: it gains you a lot of respect from others. They feel that if a dullard such as you can have an identity crisis surely a smart person such as they can have an even bigger and better one.

If you become bored with your identity crisis, you can always find out who you are by a process of eliminating other possibilities.

Such as:

You couldn't be a porcupine, because you're not that touchy.

You couldn't be a cat, because you've never had kittens.

You couldn't be a lion, because nobody runs when you roar.

You couldn't be a bird, because you have a striking lack of feathers.

You couldn't be a tree, because you've never worn a nest of robins in your hair.

You couldn't be spinach, because too many people like you.

You couldn't be a jet plane, a bus, or a train, because nobody rides you except your boss.

You couldn't be a member of Congress, because it's your wife who makes all the speeches and you who does all the listening.

You couldn't be a television performer, because you are not repeatedly interrupted by commercials.

Step by step as you find out who you couldn't possibly be, you become excitingly closer to the discovery of who you must be.

Your identity crisis is finally over when you look at your bank statement. It says there very clearly who you are. You are number Z12-0034-615—that's who you are.

Good old Z12-0034-615! The digits ring in your ears happily as you repeat them over and over. You wonder how a guy identified Z12-0034-615 could ever have forgotten who is was. Who would really want to be anyone else in the world?

Closed for Repairs

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — The heavily - traveled Seventh Street bridge over the Kansas River will have to be closed while the 40-year-old structure is being repaired, Hugh P. Doherty, city street commissioner, said Monday night.

Officials had hoped to keep the important artery at least partially open during the work, but Doherty said contractors will not bid unless the bridge is closed.

Third-Place Tie For Stage Band At Smith-Cotton

Smith-Cotton's stage band, under the direction of Robert Cummings, tied for third place in the annual Stage Band Festival held Saturday in Lebanon, Mo. The band was presented a trophy which is on display at the school.

Columbia Hickman High School was first and Jefferson City was second. Joplin tied with Smith-Cotton for third.

Among the numbers played by Smith-Cotton's band in the festival were "Groovin' Easy," "Browsin'" and "Tribute to Basie."

Thirteen schools from throughout Southern and Central Missouri participated in the festival. This is the fifth year for Lebanon to sponsor the contest.

Spring Cover-Ups

The fashion rule for spring '70 is "take it easy." Long, lean jackets and tunics make effortless fashion stretched over pleated skirts or co-ordinated with slightly flared skirts. Bright print scarf blouses and striped short-sleeved blazers add dash. Devon sets off matching separates with a boldly striped short-sleeved jacket (left). In this year's cardigan shape, it stretches over a turtle top and perky pleated skirt. Well-matched separates (right) are from Russ. The long sleeveless tunic vest is perfectly relaxed with a gently shaped skirt to match. The foulard print blouse adds a colorful dash.

Women's equality? Woman power? Lately even the women feel it necessary to exert their power and influence in asking for equality. Why? What makes some women think they need to establish their own authority? We already are not only equal, but superior.

Women are either working or homemakers. Working women, while they may not attain the title status of some men, still exert the same if not more influence in an office. Women just go about it differently. It's the old "let the man think he thought of it" routine. Women are forgiven flares of temper and sudden tears in an office because "she's a woman!"

Office routines are set by the women and innovations in filing, letter style, advertising and services offered are usually created by women. Women in offices can mean a great deal to many businesses. Because men are influenced by a pretty girl with a smile and short skirt, most offices tend to hire girls with looks and brains. Her looks she can only improve on, but her brains — if used properly — can accomplish anything.

If a woman decides to remain at home (and it nearly always is her decision), she has a variety of possible jobs. She can be a fashion designer, sewing her own and children's clothes; she can be a chef, creating new and exciting meals for her family; she can be an interior decorator, using color and style to create an interesting home. Dozens of clubs exist to offer the woman at home an opportunity to "do her thing."

If caring for children is her interest and she wants to work with more than her own, she has Cub Scouts, Brownies, Girl and Boy Scouts, church youth groups, PTA and dozens of other youth organizations which can use her help.

The decision to work or stay at home is one every woman faces at one time or another. Fortunately we have this privilege of deciding. Women would make poor coal miners, moving men, and could never fill the many jobs which require a man's strength and stamina.

Personally, opening doors for men and remembering to compliment them on their hair and clothes does not appeal to me. We would find it hard to remember to do all the little things men do for us; opening car doors, pulling out chairs and helping us on with our coats.

When it comes to demanding equal rights women had better just leave well enough alone. It could be better, but it could be a lot worse.

Miss Lynn Ellen Dexheimer daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin Dexheimer, Las Vegas, became the bride of Mr. Ronald Gene Maxwell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Jean Maxwell, Las Vegas on December 13 at the home of the bride's parents. The Rev. Dr. Mark W. Koehler performed the candlelight, double ring ceremony before a fireplace flanked by a white flocked Christmas tree with red trim and poinsettias.

Organ music was played by Miss Karen Vonfossan.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor length gown of chantilly lace and seed pearls. She wore a finger-tip illusion veil, crowned with rhinestones. She carried a bouquet of red and white roses. The bride's only jewelry was a single strand of pearls given to her by the groom.

Mrs. Beth Hansen, sister of the bride, served as attendant. She was attired in a red floor-length gown and carried red roses and carnations. Mr. Roger Maxwell, brother of the groom, was best man.

The reception was held immediately following the ceremony. The serving table was covered with a Christmas red cloth and held a three tiered fountain from which punch was served and a four-tiered cake topped by white doves.

Women of Moose Hear Therapist

A program on care and education of mentally and physically retarded children was presented to the Women of the Moose, Sedalia Chapter 1242, at a recent meeting.

The program was under the supervision of the child care chairman, Mrs. Bonnie Crider. Senior Regent Gertrude Samuels introduced the guest speaker, Miss Patricia Ark., speech therapist at the Children's Therapy Center.

Miss Ark explained that though children are usually referred to the clinic by their family physician, they are not turned away when brought to the clinic by their parents and found to need treatment.

The primary goal of the clinic is to help the child as much as possible both physically and mentally to speed his return to as nearly a normal life as possible, Miss Ark said.

The chapter of chapter 1242 was appropriately draped at the meeting in memory of the late Elva Allison and Grace G. Rochan.

Graduate Regent Maria Thomas suggested that the 19th birthday anniversary of Lodge 1242 be observed with a party on Feb. 1. Ritual director Phyllis Williams suggested that a special enrollment be held on Feb. 22.

All members were encouraged to particpate in both events.

John Sneed III Presents Program To Altrusa Club

John Sneed III, Route 5, a junior at Missouri Valley College, Marshall, presented an interesting program Monday at the luncheon meeting of Altrusa Club.

A member of the Cross Roads group who went to Africa, he told of the Anuak and Nuer tribes in the area where he stayed. There were no political boundaries, he said, but tribal boundaries. The Anuaks till corn along the river where the ground is very fertile. The Nuer tribes raise cattle.

A school is provided for boys 15 to 23 years of age, up to the ninth grade, but, the Nuers were not able to attend the government school. They had to get their schooling from the mission school, and were not permitted to come to this country for schooling. Sneed said even if he had wanted to bring one here paying all expenses, he would not have been able to come because he would not be granted a passport.

There are three to five units in a compound, and the square surface that he referred to as a floor, was like tile. The dirt for such a surface, is turned up and different things added to it. When it is dry, it is hard and smooth and easily kept clean.

Showing a picture of two women with large gourds on their heads in which they carried things. Sneed explained that they wore a pad the shape of a doughnut between their heads and the gourd. They had no trouble keeping the pads on, he remarked, because the hole in the center of the pad had worn a knot on their heads and the pad was held steady by the knot.

Another picture showed a man hollowing out a canoe of soft wood. This was comparatively easy, Sneed said, but the canoe would last only two or three years. It was much more of a job to hollow out the hard wood but a canoe of hard wood would last ten to 12 years.

The group of young people who had gone with the Cross Road program, rebuilt a building erected 20 years ago by the British when they were exporting coffee. The youths knocked out walls and rebuilt walls with chicken wire, covered with gunny sacks, and then more chicken wire, which was covered with plaster. In this they set up a work shop, with work benches and various tools with which they taught woodwork.

Sneed told of the bargaining, which was a lot of fun, and even more fun when you really didn't want what you were bargaining for, because they could tell when you wanted something. He didn't want a three-legged stool that he bargained for, but he got it, then he didn't know what to do with it. He finally put it with his other things and managed to get it home.

Sneed was introduced by Mrs. Mildred Goddard, chairman of the international relations committee. Altrusa was one of the organizations that helped sponsor young Sneed for the trip.

The meeting was presided over by Mrs. Marjorie Williams, president.

Israeli Youngsters Help Spearhead the Bitter Arab Conflict

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli youngsters, spearheading the country's war with the Arabs, have little time for throwing up barricades against the Establishment in their own homeland.

The simple issue of national survival is too close to the classroom for them to revolt against the politicians and generals who handle the Middle East war.

In fact, students have never staged an antiwar demonstration here.

Israel's 30,000 students were moved to mass demonstration only once—when university tuition fees were raised.

Recent U.S. student protests against the Vietnam war found no major echo in this country.

"What can we do but support our war?" says Shlomo Cohen, 23-year-old law student. "If we started up like American youth over Vietnam, we'd lose the war, and probably our country."

It is a feeling shared by almost all the young men and women crowding the campuses and schoolgrounds of the youthful Jewish state.

The Israeli student does plenty of time in the battlefield, spending up to 42 days a year in the reserves—backbone of the nation's army.

"The army knocks the adolescence out of us, cools the hotheads, disciplines us," says Amram Halabi, an Iran-born architecture student.

"By the time we've finished fighting we want to get married, then we have to support a family. Who's got time to do all that and still go out and demonstrate?"

Israelis have learned to label their students, a trifle sheepishly, as "indifferent." Nonetheless, the rift between youth and adult is wide and often troubled.

A top education official in Tel Aviv's minucipilativ, Yehuda Erel, puts it this way: "In Israel there is total nonidentification between youths and adults on matters of culture and way of life. The youths have their own tastes in clothing and hair styles. They have their own music. They have definite and progressive views about sex. In all this, coexistence between the generations is full of clashes and crises.

"On the other hand, there is total identification on ideological issues. The existence of the state is supreme for all of us.

"This common ground on which the two generations meet is what stops youth from putting up barricades and prevents the bloody confrontation between generations as happened in Paris and on American campuses."

Indeed, on almost every issue except security, the Israeli generation gap is a chasm.

The bulk of Jewish parents come from oppressed communities in East Europe and the Middle East. Many have no education, can hardly converse with their children, are unable to read a report card.

Coupled with this is the suffering they went through in Nazi Europe and under Arab rulers. These woes have made parents extremely lenient, often servile toward their children, and there is a sharp lack of discipline among adolescents.

Official policy is to raise Israeli children to be tough, single-minded and self-reliant. It often works in the wrong direction.

Yet many young Israelis quietly yearn for a changing of the guard. They would like a younger man of their own caliber to take over the leadership: an Israeli-born individual whose native tongue is not Yiddish or Polish but Hebrew. Defense Minister Moshe Dayan, for instance.

They regard people like 71-year-old Prime Minister Golda Meir, to quote one mimeographed schoolboy's magazine, as "outdated farmers, drainers of swamps where swamps no longer exist."

In America the word is "uptight" or "square." In Israel, it's "tsionut"—Hebrew for Zionism. Zionism has degenerated into a scornful term for long skirts, khaki trousers, hard work, and lectures on the virtues of nationalist songs and short hair.

Paradoxically, it would be hard to find an Israeli youth who negates the true meaning of Zionism—the ingathering of Jews to Israel, the Jewish national homeland.

Schools instill in youths a fierce pride and sense of independence. From first grade onward Jewish suffering in the ghettoes is underlined, the Nazi holocaust is described in detail. World history, including Islam, is taught. But the bulk of the history syllabus is devoted to the annals of Judaism.

The continued warfare on the borders, with its heavy toll of dead and wounded, has made Israeli youth harder and more cynical than in many countries.

Fewer and fewer youths are ready to follow the example of Israel's founding fathers and settle in the desert or join the kibbutz, or collective farm.

"I want to live well, make money, fun," said a young professional tractor driver who earns $30 a day. "I could do the same work on a kibbutz and earn nothing. I can't be sure I'll live long with the war going on, so at least I want to live well."

Defensive Unity

Israel is a country at war. And its young people devote their energy and time to the fight for national survival rather than to attacks on their own establishment. (AP)

Academic Cause

Israeli students have never staged an anti-war demonstration. The country's 30,000 students have, in fact, only been moved to mass demonstration once — in 1966 when university tuition fees were raised. They are shown here as they gathered on the campus of the Hebrew University in Jerusalem. (AP)

Crossroads Comment...

It's just now coming to light. In Columbia, four men were arrested for shooting pool after midnight on Friday morning, January 16. The Columbia Tribune is poking fun at the outcome of a raid, not blaming the enterprising policemen so much but rather the city ordinance that permits such procedure. Where questionable activity is merely pool shooting after midnight, the editor says, an arrest is more demeaning to the side of the law than to the supposed criminals. Says he, "We don't really want our policemen spending their time arresting 1 a.m. pool shooters, now do we?"

—O—

As an outspoken public official, Vice-President Spiro Agnew has been receiving repeated plaudits for his forthright verbal declarations on matters of public interest.

But let's don't overlook former Vice-President Hubert Humphrey and some of his non-partisan comments recently, especially the one on the subject of the nomination of G. Harold Carswell to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Humphrey said Carswell should be judged on his record and not for a speech he made in 1948 endorsing white supremacy while seeking public office.

We never had any use for the tenets of the Ku Klux Klan when members of that abortive organization were thick as flies on a St. Bernard dog's back. In Indiana during the 1920's, we remember some politicans joined up in the anti-Jew, anti-Negro, anti-Catholic movement. They were good men who stumbled and were sorry for it after the Klan faded out. Later they became acceptable and efficient public officials.

So what Mr. Humphrey has to say should be repeated: "I don't think you should hold a man accountable for a speech he made two or 25 years ago under entirely different circumstances. I am sure that the Senate will take a good look at Judge Carswell's record. And if that record shows a sense of balance and a sense of openness then he should be confirmed."

For his own openness of opinion on subjects which are becoming too politically partisan, Hubert deserves an accolade.

—O—

In light of what has been going on in recent years among the spenders in the political fraternity back in Washington, D.C., President Nixon's veto of the $19.7 billion dollar health-education appropriation bill is in order. Feeding the fires of inflation, fostering inefficiency and misdirecting money, as the President declares this appropriation would function, is cause enough to rally the taxpayers in support of his opposition against the Congress continuing to spend the nation poor. Let's quit kidding ourselves about the problem, someone has to start swinging the economy ax and there's no better person to start it than the man at the top.

Britain's Wilson Meets With Nixon

By EDWIN ROTH
Foreign Correspondent

LONDON — Britain's pipe-smoking Labor Prime Minister Harold Wilson during his visit in Washington this week was expected to do his utmost to corral President Richard Nixon into his campaign for the British general election which must be held before April 1971, but is now expected for this year. While President Nixon cannot electioneer for Wilson, anything favorable he says about him during this visit, and especially any respect he shows, will be exploited by Wilson to present himself as a great world statesman with great influence on President Nixon.

What Wilson wants from President Nixon more than anything else at this time is praise for the British economy.

On the British side, Wilson's trip will be a jamboree of political and economic news management.

In his talks with President Nixon at the White House, Wilson promoted his peacemaker image. He claims — if not directly then certainly by implication — a lot of the credit for any moves President Nixon may make to end the Vietnam war.

The role of peace-making mediator between the United States and Russia is very familiar for Wilson — and he may visit Moscow between his trip to Washington and the British general election.

But the most important aspect of this visit for Wilson is publicly promoting the belief that Britain's economy has overcome its crisis, and is recovering.

Wilson's great present publicity advantage is the fact that Britain's international trade figures were temporarily in surplus last year. This happened because Britain got enormous financial aid from other nations, and had the smallest rise in the value of imports of any major nation — about 4¾ per cent, while other nations expanded their imports by 15 per cent, and the price of raw material imports was rising. The British import restraint was caused by very tough, tight monetary and fiscal government policies, which cannot be maintained in an election year.

But Wilson is now threatened by a tremendous inflationary pay explosion this year. Immense wage increase demands are being made by strikes and strike threats throughout Britain's industry and commerce.

Although Wilson said publicly for many months last year that his proposed law reforming labor unionism in Britain was vital for Britain, essential for economic recovery, and essential for his government's continuance in office, he surrendered unconditionally to the labor unions, and abandoned this law.

Under the unwritten British constitution, Wilson can hold the next election any time he chooses between now and April 1971, when the present parliament expires. He must announce the election date only four weeks before it is held.

For Wilson, the most important event of his Washington visit will be his big press conference at the British embassy after his talks with President Nixon on Wednesday. Wilson hopes to time it so that it can be televised to Britain during the British peak viewing period.

What he needs, of course, is for President Nixon to support this promotion. But whatever Wilson is asked and whatever he answers — British television will show him to millions of British voters as an important, respected world statesman and peace maker being questioned on vital world topics by the world's press in Washington.

Wilson has not forgotten that only one month before the British election of 1959, the U.S. President toured London in an open car with Conservative Prime Minister Harold Macmillan, who won a tremendous election victory. But that U.S. President was the honorary citizen of London, Dwight D. Eisenhower, with whom Britain's relationship was very special.

President Richard Nixon would be no vote-getter for a British politician — but Wilson will know exactly how to electioneer in Washington by showing Britain how successful he is, how influential he is — and how much he is respected.

Expose 'Health Brutality' Among Poor

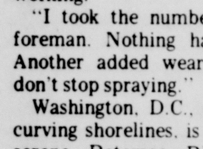
WASHINGTON — A bombshell report, held back by the American Public Health Association, accuses federal and local authorities alike of practicing "healthy brutality" against the poor.



Jack Anderson

This column has obtained a copy of the unreleased report, whose grim findings should be read by every concerned citizen.

"We are shocked and still reeling," begins the report by the association's president and immediate past president, Paul Cornely and Lester Breslow, both famed public health physicians.

In Houston, the space age city with renowned heart transplant facilities, the Cornely-Breslow team found neither space nor heart for Mexican-Americans.

The Houston authorities, in anticipation of the team's visit to the worst slum area, attempted a hasty clean-up and even ordered a rare garbage pick-up. But they could not hide the stooped, 59-year-old grandmother who had lost four of 12 children to malnutrition-introduced diarrhea. Nor could they drive away the snakes and rats which prey on babies there.

—Poisoning People—

In Tulare County, Calif., poor whites and Mexican-Americans, too proud to go on relief, told of staggering in the fields as spray planes illegally spewed pesticides on their heads. Some 200 workers are felled or sickened each year despite laws against spraying DDT and other poisons where people are working.

"I took the number of the plane and told the foreman. Nothing happened," said one worker. Another added wearily: "What's the use? They don't stop spraying."

Washington, D.C., with its shaded avenues and curving shorelines, is the nation's pride. But in the serene Potomac River, which gently washes Washington's shores, the doctors found "dead fish, floating sewage, rotting plant life ... more than 400 million gallons of partially treated or raw sewage a day."

Untreated defecation, deadly salmonella and other disease debris are eaten by fish that swim up and down the Potomac and far beyond. Indeed, Dr. Werner Janssen, a scientist at the Chemical Biological Warfare Center of Ft. Detrick, Md., warned the team that the fish were like secret time bombs spreading "the human disease-producing organisms ... to areas thought to be safe."

The report blames federal and local governments, along with land developers, for despoiling and poisoning such rivers as the Potomac.

In Chicago, Mayor Richard Daley's health commissioner snubbed the two distinguished presidents of the American Public Health Association. But they went down into the city's ghettos anyway.

—Rot in Chicago—

There they found, a few minutes from the multi-million dollar towers of the Windy City, "an unforgettable profile of destitution, deprivation ... children amid rotting garbage and trash."

A Negro woman could not get repair of her abdominal surgery because she couldn't repay 11 pints of blood to a Cook County hospital. Another watched her baby die an angonized death for three hours while waiting treatment in the emergency room. Of every 1,000 children born, 45 die as babies in one area.

The most embittering chapter in the lengthy report dealt with the truly "forgotten man" — the Indian who leaves the reservation to make his way on the outside but who winds up in a redman's ghetto.

In Great Falls, Mont., the doctors discovered "Hill 57" — so named because there are "57 varieties" of tincans and junk on its side. There, 15 large families have a single water faucet.

Across town, 12 Indian families live on a hill used as a trash pile by local residents. One World War II veteran supports his wife and six children by scavanging for auto parts in the hillside junk. He earns $2 on a good day.

Nine years ago, a major cancer operation opened his bowels. He has no time for the surgery to close them, because of his family's pressing needs. The family's sole "utility" is a privy 50 feet from his shack.

A nearby industry refuses to let the impoverished Indians use its water line, so water must be delivered at a high cost to the residents when the old cistern is broken.

Of all the cities the doctors visited, Atlanta seemed to be trying the hardest. Even there, they found a four-by-eight cell without ventilation, for the treatment of alcoholics. Its sole occupant was an alcoholic epileptic picked up as he tried to make it to a hospital.

—Politicians, Doctors Blamed—

The two doctors, seasoned men who have seen many horrors in their lives, end their report with almost a shreik of anguish: "Who is to blame in this degradation of life and health?"

They draw their answer from a community doctor, who replied fiercely: "First, the political structure and city hall. Second, organized medicine with its platitudes. And third, the health care system.

"If any should think that we present an exaggerated picture," declare the doctors, "let him spend as we did a few full days actually looking, listening and smelling ... Health care for the poor has broken down. The crisis is not coming, it is here."

Their recommendations: revamping medicaid, establishing poverty clinics, letting young physicians work with the poor as an alternative to military duty — and, of course, federal outlays.

Ironically, President Nixon is now seeking to trim down the $19.7 billion appropriation for Health, Education, and Welfare. Some of the money would go into just such efforts as the report seeks.

Pollution Not Only Nixon's Dilemma; It's Everybody's

By BRUCE BIOSSAT
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON (NEA) President Nixon's sharp focus on "environmental control" in his State of the Union address is unprecedented. Never before has a president given such attention to the rising dilemma of air and water pollution.

Already some of his critics are branding this as little more than the empty commitment of words. Since many young people are developing high interest in the pollution problem, the President is also said to be seizing this chance to divert them from their long preoccupation with the Vietnam war.

No one can say he does not have this partly in mind. But Nixon's associates insist that his concern for the deteriorating American environment is very real.

Because of the difficulty of controlling inflation, he may hold back on the money side for awhile. He may not spend all of the $800 million Congress voted this fiscal year to fight pollution. Yet he is pictured as a man who wants to be remembered as tackling the tough new issues of the 1970s—not just getting rid of old ones like the war.

Anyone who takes seriously the dire forecasts of the environmental specialists—the worst of which is that we will run out of good air to breathe in a few decades—must welcome the President's attention and the country's, to the extent they are truly enlisted.

There is plenty of evidence justifying pollution complaints against industrial plants, airplanes, automobiles and even government facilities. Maximum pressure may be needed to force real action.

Nevertheless, the accusatory finger should not be pointed only at the easy, obvious targets. The truth is that man is a despoiler—of his land as well as his air and water—and Americans are far from being any kind of exception.

Dr. Jean Mayer, nutrition specialist presently serving the President on food and hunger issues, blames the affluent—in this nation and presumably elsewhere—for wrecking the environment.

In an interview given to T George Harris in the magazine, "Psychology Today," Mayer says:

"Rich people occupy much more space, consume more of each natural resource, disturb the ecology more, litter the landscape with bottles and paper, and pollute more land, air and water with chemical, thermal and radioactive waste."

Maybe his argument is incontestable—up to a point. Yet, until the poisonous wastes of the internal combustion engine and some factory processes began to engulf us, most of the "environment-wrecking" was done to the land.

And, while prospering civilizations like ours and those of the ancient Greeks and Romans can be gravely faulted for exploiting the land with too little thought for the future, no serious conservationist stops his indictment there.

Ancient Greece ruined itself by ripping off its thick forest cover and exposing the bared land to destructive sheep and goats. The Romans went down the same road. Spain's land is one great scar.

In relatively impoverished 15th-century Italy, however, the forests were still so large and dense they could conceal whole armies. The ravaging of the land has gone on—and still does — in the poor Mediterranean countries. One naturalist says these denuded lands are doomed to exhaustion unless radical change takes place.

This specialist says reviving the dead landscape could take thousands of years. In poverty-ridden Africa, the vast Sahara grows wider under land misuse by farmers. China and India, never bastions of affluent capitalism, have a terrible history of land waste.

So blame belongs not just on governments and corporations and the affluent few in the world. Misuse of life-supporting environment is everybody's burden. If we Americans, for starters, are ready to reverse course and pay the incredible costs of restoration, it will be one tremendous miracle. The President is asking.

"There seems to be a growing resentment in this area. They're wondering why you don't have a Midwestern White House, too!"

The Unlucky Expert looked even more hapless than usual, so we didn't even try to evade him. Let's listen to his tale of woe.

"It was the last rubber and I was actually a trifle ahead. We were both vulnerable and I actually picked up an opening bid. Unfortunately, I was in the fourth seat and all I could do was listen while my opponents contracted for game. My partner led the five of clubs and I topped dummy's king with my ace. I led back the four of trumps."

"So far, so good," was our comment. "What happened next?"

"South held the trick with the 10 and led the 10 of clubs. I won with the queen and played the ace and nine of trumps. South won, led the king of diamonds, a diamond to the ace and a third diamond, which he ruffed. Now he led the six of spades. My partner played low and, after considerable thought, South played dummy's 10. Then he ruffed another diamond with his last trump, cashed one high spade and made the last two tricks with dummy's ace of spades and a fifth diamond.

"Imagine my partner not having the brains to go up with the jack of spades and block out that extra entry to dummy!"

We can imagine it, all right, and wonder if many people looking at the North and West hands only would have been able to visualize the exact situation and put up that jack of spades. Of course, our friend was unlucky. South's play of the 10 of spades from dummy is a standard play but one that is seldom made. He would have looked so silly if East had produced the spade jack and set him two tricks.

Grateful Conqueror

By CYRENE DEAR

WASHINGTON, D.C. — Ever since January 1967 when the National Newspaper Association Study Mission visited Nigeria, I have read with special interest the struggles of that divided country. I was fortunate to be one of a group of five publishers to meet and interview Lt. Colonel Yakubu Gowon, the young military ruler of Nigeria's federal government in Lagos.

The then 32-year-old Gowon was the son of native Christian missionaries. He was educated at Sandhurst (the West Point of England) and spoke excellent Oxford English. He did not live in a palace, nor even a Nigerian White House, but had his living quarters at the military base near the capital city of Lagos. The uniformed, handsome Gowon was exceedingly personable and asked many intelligent questions about our U.S. government. He was a great admirer of President Kennedy and spoke sorowfully of the great loss his death had meant not only to America but to the world.

In speaking of his own country he told of his dream to build a strong federal government. He was appreciative of the British colonization of Nigeria, the valuable contribution of religious missionaries to his country in converting and educating the natives, and the aid programs which had helped to develop the great resources of this rich African country.

Four months after that interview, the Republic of Biafra, under the command of General Chukwuemeka O. Ojukwu, a millionaire and a poet, (also of Sandhurst Military Academy), believed that his state could never live in harmony with the rest of Nigeria and seceded. Young Gowon became a Major General, and the two former friends and classmates became mortal enemies engaged in civil war.

After 2½ years and two million deaths the war has ended with Ojukwu in exile and Gowon the conqueror. It is his task to bind up the nation's wounds, feed the starving and restore his dream of federation. My impression is this dedicated and determined young man, who like Abraham Lincoln believed that "a nation divided against itself cannot long endure," will succeed in keeping Nigeria united.

Movies Have Strange Attraction for TV Stars

NEW YORK (AP) — What do James Garner, Steve McQueen, Clint Eastwood, Mia Farrow, Lee Marvin, Richard Boone, Richard Crenna and James Franciscus have in common?

Each starred in a television series but has since quit the medium for the movies.

In recent years, the movies have siphoned off the best talents of television, not only in acting, but in writing, directing and producing. Not many who have left seem to have any regrets and only a few have ever gone back to the tube.

A strong case could be argued that the defection of such talent is a major cause of the vacuous state of television today. One producer complained not long ago that every time he put a series together he had to build a new team from scratch.

An equally strong, and more convincing, case could be constructed of the charges that these people were driven from television by its calculated drive to ring up the highest Nielsen ratings. Such an atmosphere, accompanied by TV's voracious appetite and inexorable timetable, leaves little room for anything provocative or innovative.

Regardless of the money and fame attached to television, the movies are still considered the big time. "It's like playing on the first squad as opposed to the club team," said Franciscus. "There's something so personally exciting about doing a film." The former star of "Naked City" and "Mr. Novak" said he is making less money in the movies, "but I'm happier now."

But the chief cause of the actors' love-hate relationship is that television's preoccupation with ratings and assembly-line production squeeze the artistic juices dry.

"Television in a sense is do or die, but in the movies you can say no, let's do it again," said Lee Marvin.

That Wider Screen

From the actors' side, the large movie screen offers more in many ways than the smaller television one. Among those now film-making after initial television success are Steve McQueen (upper left) in "The Reivers," Richard Boone (upper right) in "The Kremlin Letter," James Garner (lower left) in "Sledge" and Mia Farrow in "John and Mary." (AP)

Franciscus says a prime reason he left was "because of the indifference to the artistic endeavor. It's not that you're any better when you shoot three pages of script a day than 12 pages, but I found the whole production comes out better with a movie.

"This industry is incapable of dissecting the temper of our times," he said. "In films you can talk about the hippies or whatever. But when an advertising executive says Mr. Novak can't hit this guy, even though he's raping his girl friend, because he's a school teacher, it puts a limitation on your depth. With Novak there were so many things I wanted to go in and chew up."

Boone's experiences took him from "Medic" to "Have Gun, Will Travel" to "The Richard Boone Theater." The latter fell into the familiar category of critical success, ratings failure.

"Nobody's tried to do anything on that level since then," lamented Boone. "I felt it was a turning point for the worst, for television, for the public, and for actors.

In reference to the ratings, Boone scoffed: "I think the boobs control the tube." Says Crenna: "If we continue to base success or failure on the Nielsen ratings, then we all need to be led away by the hand."

Three stars who made it big on television, then left for the movies, are coming back. New comedy series are being prepared for CBS next season for Andy Griffith and Mary Tyler Moore and the following season for Dick Van Dyke.

But it is rare for an actor to return on a permanent basis. A few, like Brian Keith and Efrem Zimbalist Jr., succeed in both mediums at the same ime.

Ice Jams Dissolve On the Mississippi

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Ice jams on the Mississippi River have disappeared under unseasonably mild tempertures and river traffic is slowly getting back to normal, a Corps of Engineers spokesman said Monday.

The river level, so low last week a number of towboats and tows were grounded, was up about a foot. The Engineers spokesman said the rise was not much, "but every little bit helps.

"A little more water and no freezing, that's all we need," he said.

At one time earlier in the month, 40-mile-long ice gorges completely halted river traffic above Cairo, Ill.

Public is Warned Of Confidence Men

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — An assistant attorney general in charge of the consumer protection division urged Missouri suburbanites today to beware of unscrupulous gangs of septic tank cleaners.

He said one such traveling gang in southwestern Missouri recently bilked customers by telling homeowners they were officials of the Division of Health and a state law required that septic tanks be cleaned every six months.

Christopher S. Bond, the division's chief counsel, said in one case the homeowner was billed $240 for a job that took less than an hour. Reputable firms, he said, charge much less unless there are unusual difficulties.

Young said he had enjoyed past associations with the Legion but "in recent years I have reason to be disgusted with some acts and actions of a small group of so-called policy-makers at national headquarters."

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Gov. Harold LeVander, 59, announced Monday that he will bow out of politics after his four-year term expires this year.

LeVander, a Republican, had been expected to run again but said he had decided he preferred private life.

His withdrawal creates an open race, with Lt. Gov. James B. Goetz, 33, and Atty. Gen. Douglas Head, 39, likely to be the chief Republican aspirants.

Head had been seeking party endorsement to run for the U.S. Senate, a spot also sought by U.S. Rep. Clark MacGregor.

Democrats have six candidates for governor in the field. Both parties hold state conventions in June to endorse candidates.

Former Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey is expected to be the Democratic candidate for the U.S. Senate. He has indicated no interest in the race for governor.

Teen Disapproves Of Censorship

Dear Ann Landers: I am still boiling over that woman who raced her kids to the paper every day to see if your column was fit for them to read. She said she would cancel her subscription to the paper if you printed one more dirty letter. I'll bet anything she is fighting against sex education in public schools, too.

A girl I know has a mother like that. If she says the word "boy" in the house she gets grounded for three days. Of course, she is meeting guys in garages and parks and on street corners, just to get even with her ma. And she's putting out to everybody. What do these mothers think they are accomplishing when they hide your column? Don't they know every normal teen-ager thinks about sex? Your column tells them how they ought to think about it. Do these mothers believe if they tell their kids to forget about sex that they will? How come they don't remember how it was when they were teen-agers?

That dumb mother doesn't realize you are doing HER job. She should thank her lucky stars you are able to communicate with her teen-agers. Kids listen to you and respect you. For sure that mother is out in left field without a glove.

I hope you don't let letters like that get to you. Please keep on writing your column, Ann. We need you. — Tampa Teen

Dear Teen: Letters like that don't bother me, because for every one of THOSE, I get 20 like yours. I intend to keep at it as long as my typewriter holds up — and I've got a very fine electric machine which is virtually indestructible.

Dear Ann Landers: I am getting so fed up on office solicitation I'm ready to scream. For the third time in seven weeks, I've been asked to chip in for a going-away gift. The girls are not getting married, or even leaving town. They are quitting to take other jobs.

Our office manager has been here 17 years. She is wonderfully efficient, has a beautiful disposition and is loved by everyone. Someone should take up the collection for HER — not the dames who quit to make $7 more a week somewhere else.

I told the last person who approached me for a going-away gift donation, "Sorry, no." It was easy. Others should try it. — Omaha

Dear O.: Here's your letter And for those who can't say, "Sorry, no," as easily as you, I suggest they clip this column and had it to the next collector.

———

Dear Ann Landers: This is no big deal, but I'd like your opinion. When my cousin visited me recently, she brought along a record album which belonged to one of her friends. She said her friend didn't know she had "borrowed" the album so we had to be extra careful with it. When my cousin left, she forgot to take the album.

A few weeks later I was taking the record to my cousin and it got a little warped from being accidentally left on the car set which was parked in the sun.

Now my cousin says I owe her $5.00. I say she is responsible for the record. What do you say? — Judy and Lisa

Dear J and L: You both sound like a couple of dollies to me. Split the cost of the record and forget it.

Boa Constrictor Seeks Warm Home

WATERLOO, Iowa (AP) — A three-foot pet boa constrictor named Adam, about due for his fortnightly feeding, is slithering around between the floors of an apartment house and has so far foiled attempts by his owner and police to lure him out.

Adam, apparently seeking a warm place, crawled into a heater duct shortly after Mary Rees, 16, brought the snake to her second floor apartment from a pet shop two weeks ago.

He's been there ever since, and is about due for his biweekly repast of a live white mouse. One policeman has suggested Miss Rees put a live mouse in front of the heating duct to lure Adam out.

State Mineral Wealth Hits New Peak in '69

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Missouri's mineral production value rose 30 per cent to an all time high of nearly $360 million in 1969, the State Geological Survey reported today.

The report was based on preliminary estimates by the survey and the U.S. Bureau of Mines.

"Rather than a reflection of inflationary prices," the report said in "Missouri Mineral Industry News," the "dramatic rise is a result of increased production in nearly all of the major mineral commodoties with several setting new production records.

"The principal contributing factor was increased metal production from new iron and lead mines."

"The $84 million increase over 1968 was the largest single year dollar increase in the state's history.

Leading minerals in order of value were lead, cement, stone, iron, lime and coal.

Missouri, long the leading lead producing state, dug 352,000 tons out of the ground last year, or almost 120,000 tons more than the previous record set in 1917. It was valued at $104.5 million, highest ever recorded in the state for a single mineral.

Copper and silver, byproducts of lead mining, also set new records. The copper recovered was valued at $9,442,000 and silver at $1,729,000.

Missouri now has two major iron mines and mills and last year's shipments reached a record of 2.75 million long tons valued at $38,530,000.

Among the nonmetals, cement production set a record for the fifth straight year. Missouri is now sixth nationally in cement production, is the largest producer in the Missouri Valley and ranks second only to Michigan in the midwest.

Portland cement production was valued at $74,267,000 and masonry cement at $1,331,000.

The only nonmetal showing a decline was sand and gravel, down 2 per cent because of strikes during much of the construction season. Even so, sand and gravel production was valued at $13,567,000.

Coal production reached 4 million tons by the end of the year and it was valued at more than $17,800,000.

The new Prairie Hill coal mine opened in Randolph County during the year to supply the Associated Electric plant at Thomas Hill and a new field in Barton County is being developed to supply the Empire District Electric plant at Asbury in Jasper County.

An unofficial tabulation indicates Missouri has a possible 45 billion tons of unmined bituminous coal, ranking the state ninth or perhaps eighth in the nation.

As a byproduct of Missouri's mineral boom, St. Joseph Lead Co. is producing sulfuric acid at its Herculaneum plant and recently loaded a Mississippi River barge with 1,500 tons of acid.

The geological survey noted a special advantage of their production. It said:

"Not only does this project produce a saleable byproduct which goes into the fertilizer industry, but it reduces air pollution as well since the sulfur formerly was emitted into the air."

Missourian Helped Make Kennedy's Eternal Flame

MOBERLY, Mo. (AP) — Retired Army Sgt. Thomas W. Williams has a number of momentoes of his 20 years service but none more meaningful than a model of the Eternal Flame designed for the grave of President John F. Kennedy.

Raised in Thompson, Mo., Sgt. Williams was one of seven soldiers ordered to design and construct the Eternal Flame. They were notified at 5 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 24, 1963. The funeral was the following Monday afternoon.

No specifications for the size or design were given in the order—only that it light the first time, stay burning and be completed by 8 a.m. Monday.

Williams was the Army's senior instructor of mechanical and technical engineering at Fort Belvoir, Va. He and his team designed, gathered the materials, assembled the unit, tested and completed the installation at 2 a.m. Monday, six hours hours ahead of their deadline.

The light, 7--feet in diameter and 3-feet, 4-inches tall, ignited the first time it was tested.

The light also ignited promptly during the graveside service and burned without interruption until the Kennedy grave was moved to a new site.

At that time, the original Eternal Flame was placed in the Smithsonian Institution and a new light was designed for the tomb.

The Army ordered ten models of the original flame made each one-sixteenth the size of the original. Each of the seven men who made the flame received a medal. The others went to Mrs. Kennedy, Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara.

Williams' work won commendations from McNamara, Secretary of the Army Cyrus Vance, and Mrs. Kennedy.

A Sergeant First Class, Williams retired last fall and returned to Missouri. He is now employed by a trucking firm in Moberly, where he makes his home with his wife and their six children. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. T.O. Williams, now live in Paris, Mo.

Gravel roads in Missouri's state highway system almost will be a thing of the past when the Highway Commission's oiling program is completed this summer. All but 20 miles of road will be oiled, of which 10 miles are in Stockton Reservoir. The remaining 10 miles are under construction contract.

New Luxury Car

The name's familiar, but get a load of that styling! Making its recent debut in New York is the Stutz Blackhawk, the first of a new line of custom made — and the most expensive — American luxury cars. Hand-made and produced in limited quantity by Stutz Motor Car of America, the Blackhawk retails for a mere $22,500 to $75,000.

Romney Not Discounted From Michigan Politics

WASHINGTON (AP) — A top Michigan Republican reads George W. Romney's near disclaimer of Senate candidacy as a signal the housing secretary, or his wife, really want to run against Democratic incumbent Sen. Philip A. Hart.

Of the four men President Nixon recruited to his Cabinet from the nation's state houses, Romney now appears the most likely to head back into elective politics—personally, or as the husband of a candidate.

If he does not make the race, his wife, Lenore, may—in fact, Romney said Monday she would be the better choice.

The former Michigan governor who now heads the Department of Housing and Urban Development has urged Michigan Republicans to agree on another candidate to become a consensus challenger to Hart.

But in a Monday news conference he did not totally rule out a Senate campaign, for himself or for Mrs. Romney. Only if the party cannot agree on another candidate, Romney said, would Mrs. Romney consider the race.

A leading GOP figure, insisting on anonymity, said the message apparently is that Romney or his wife will be in the running.

Romney's hint of possible availability is likely itself to prove a barrier to a concensus on any other candidate when party officials meet in St. Clair, Mich., Saturday to talk about the coming campaign.

The party hierarchy is likely to prove reluctant to turn to another candidate while the Romneys remain possible entries. "They would start with a tremendous advantage," a state GOP leader said.
